To the Electors OF THE County of Lennox.

Fellow Electors, the time is drawing near when the electors of this county in common with its other constituencies will be called upon to elect a representative for the Provincial Assembly.

It may not be possible for me to see you all personally and I adopt this method of placing myself before you and reaching as many of you as possible.

As you are aware in December last in convention assembled, my friends did me the honor of selecting me as their candidate for the Provincial Parliament. I am therefore now before you in that capacity soliciting your votes and influence at the approaching election.

I need not say that this honor was placed upon me unsought or solicited.

My opponent and myself are personal friends and although we differ in politics, neither of us permit this difference to interfere with our social or business relations and I feel confident in saying that we shall continue and close the contest as good friends as we commenced it. I flatter myself that I do not need any personal introduction to you. I have been with you and among you in fact for the last 25 years, and have taken a more or less active part in your public and local affairs. You are therefore in a good position to judge of my ability to perform the important duties pertaining thereto in a manner creditable to myself and advantageous to the old county of Lennox. Whilst my politics have been Liberal I have never been a hide bound partisan. I shall never consider myself bound to support my party except when I believe them to be right and acting in the best interests of the Province and can give to you a reason for the faith that is in me and can

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
May 18th, 1908.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor H. Meng in the chair.

Present—Reeve Symington, and Councillors Alexander, Steacy, Simpson, Denison, Osborne and Kimmerly. The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Geo. A. Stinson & Co., Toronto, asking for an option of a week or ten days on the $17,250 debentures offered for sale by the town. Laid on the table.

The Town Property Committee reported in reference to the tariff for rental of the town hall, which is as follows:

For travelling shows $10 per night, and for more than one night the Mayor is empowered to make special arrangements.

Dances $7 per night.

Travelling Concert Co.'s, $5 per night. Lodges and Associations, $5 per night.

Church Entertainments, $5 per night.

Local Charity Concerts, $5 per night.

Public Meeting, other than for town purposes, $5 per night.

The above will be the regular charges, except in special cases, when the Mayor shall have power to make special arrangements.

They also reported that the horse stalls had been erected in the fire hall, and the walls repaired and kalsomined. The report was adopted.

Coun. Denison also gave notice that in the near future he would introduce in the council the matter of the purchase of a hose wagon and a set of harness.

Mr. Storms, the caretaker of the town buildings, was instructed to collect all rentals for the town hall, deduct his fee from the same, and pay the balance to the town treasurer, getting a receipt for same.

Coun. Alexander reported to the council that he had looked up the by-law relating to the setting off of fireworks on the public streets of the town, and found that the said by-law was very stringent concerning this matter.

Coun. Kimmerly said he thought large posters should be posted up around the town calling the attention of the public to the by-law concerning the setting off of fireworks on the public streets.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Osborne, that the clerk be instructed to advertise in the local papers of next issue for tenders for the construction of a sewer on West street. Tenders to be received up to June 1st, 1908, at noon. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Denison, seconded by Coun. Alexander, that tenders be advertised for in the Kingston and Belleville papers for the construction of the above sewer. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Alexander, that the town treasurer be instructed to bill all parties indebted to the town for pavements, rentals, licenses, etc., and if the accounts are not promptly paid, the same to be handed to the town solicitor for collection. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Steacy, that the clerk cause advertisements to be inserted in the local papers asking for tenders for the position of pound-keeper, tenders to be in the hands of the clerk by June 1st, noon. Carried.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To Messrs. Carscallen, Madole, Wilson and Wartman.

As candidates for election to the Ontario Legislature and the Dominion House of Commons respectively, an announcement through the press of your views regarding public questions now before the country, and especially as regards an "Act" passed by the Ontario Legislature during the session of 1906, and relating to the rural public schools of the province, would be appreciated by the electors of this riding.

It is true that Messrs. Wilson and Wartman as candidates are not directly connected with the local affairs of this province, but as they are both representative men, and as it has been rumored that Mr. Wilson was strongly opposed to the school law in question, while a rumor to the effect that he was friendly to the Act, has also been in circulation, a plain statement from him would make his position better understood. For similar reasons it is desirable that Mr. Wartman should be heard from.

The electors who have been robbed by the provisions of the iniquitous school law of 1906 are anxiously awaiting statements from Mr. Carscallen and Mr. Madole as to how far either is prepared to go in order to have that unjust measure wiped from the statute books of this province. In supporting it, was Mr. Carscallen unacquainted with the provisions of the Act? Is he now opposed to it?

Would he use his influence to secure its repeal, even going to the length, if necessary, of voting want of confidence in the government which he supports?

When before the electors on previous occasions he has boasted his independence. Does he occupy that position now?

What are Mr. Madole's views on this question? It is essential that his position should be clearly defined. In spite of the statement that large appropriations have been voted to the rural schools, the fact remains that in a very large number of school sections, the municipal taxes have been increased one third, in consequence of the present school law. That is a matter directly affecting the ratepayers' pockets, and they are only exercising a right in demanding a plain statement from candidates seeking their support.

Yours etc.,
W. R. LOTT.

...a matter...to the old county of Lennox. Whilst my politics have been Liberal I have never been a hide bound partisan. I shall never consider myself bound to support my party except when I believe them to be right and acting in the best interests of the Province and can give to you a reason for the faith that is in me and can justify, at least to my own conscience, the course I shall see it my duty to take as your honored representative.

From what I have already said you will understand my position and I trust it will meet with your approval and merit your most generous support irrespective of party. In matters pertaining to our own country should you honor me with confidence and elect me as your representative I shall always consider myself at your disposal and you will ever find me ready and willing to do what in me lies to advance the interests of our own locality and especially that part of it confined within the bounds of Lennox irrespective of local personal or political considerations, and if I can consistently and properly do a political opponent a service I shall be as cheerfully at his disposal as I will be to those attached to me by political ties. This I consider the proper position for a representative of the people to take.

I hope to have during the campaign the opportunity of discussing with you on the public platform at greater length some of the many public questions which are at the present time interesting the people.

To those of you I shall not be able to see personally, that this will make no difference as to the activity you will put into the campaign in my behalf and that you will see the careless ones and invite them to the polls to cast their ballot for the cause of good Government.

Again soliciting your votes, influence and support at the approaching election and thanking you in advance.

I am your obedient servant,
M. S. MADOLE.

TRAVERS—SHIBLEY.

Our towns people received a pleasant surprise on Saturday morning, May 16th, when the bell of St. Mary Magdalene's Church announced the nuptials of Mr. R. G. H. Travers, the popular manager of the Crown Bank here with Mrs. Deborah Deming Shibley, widow of the late John A. Shibley, one of the most popular and charming ladies in the town. The ceremony was performed by the Vicar, Rev. Rural Dean Dibb, only the immediate relatives being present. A light luncheon was partaken of at the beautiful home of the bride, and the happy couple went off on the noon flyer. The bride looked very charming in a brown travelling suit, and a merry widow hat with a large bunch of American beauty roses. The EXPRESS tenders congratulations and best wishes. This is the first time the new bell has been rung for a wedding.

PRINGLE—BRANDON.

The Scribe at Morven omitted through an oversight to Chronicle an event which may perhaps be of interest some day to our local Historical Association. It was the first marriage solemnized in the new Anglican Church of St. Thomas, Morven, on April 22nd, 1908. Frederick Harold Pringle, a prosperous young farmer of Richmond Township, and Frances May Brandon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Shirley Brandon, were the contracting parties, and you might roam the County o'er and perhaps the country too, before finding a handsomer couple. The little church was filled to its utmost capacity, and the Sanctuary was made a very bower of beauty and fragrance by the loving hands of the bride's friends. Her sister Elizabeth, made a very charming bridesmaid and Mr. Garfield Sills performed the duties of groomsmen. The officiating priest was Rev. F. T. Dibb, Vicar of Napanee and Rural Dean of Lennox, who followed the time-honored custom of presenting the first bride in a new Church, with a handsome Bible. A truly sumptuous breakfast was spread at the bride's home, after which the happy couple drove to Napanee with a very fine selection of old boots wired to the axle tree, and took the flyer to Toronto for the honeymoon amid showers of rice and good wishes.

Geo. Slack, who will spend the remainder of his life in the Kingston penitentiary for assaulting an old lady in Toronto in March last was taken to the "pen" on Monday. "I'm innocent of this charge, so help me God," exclaimed Slack when sentenced by Justice Anglin.

An inhuman accident happened late Monday afternoon, in the village of Bloomfield, near Picton when little two-year-old Jacob Oliver was critically injured, probably maimed for life, through utter carelessness. Two men, whose names just at present are not known, were driving through the village, when the little fellow was playing in the roadway. Seemingly, through utter carelessness the men ran him down and his cry of pain did not stop them but they drove furiously on to escape attention, so witnesses of the unfortunate affair state. The child's injuries were serious ones, his arm being broken. Besides several minor cuts and bruises about the head were received.

BASE BALL CONCERT.

The concert organized by Mr. Fisher on behalf of the baseball club, and presented in the Town Hall on Thursday of last week, will not readily be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present. The programme as a glance will show, was somewhat ambitious for local talent to undertake, but it was handled with taste and skill throughout. Mrs. VanLoven and Mr. Fisher each rendered songs of a very high order, which the audience were not slow to recognize, but still more effective, if possible, was the manner in which they gave the very beautiful duett, "The language of love (Abt) and o'er the Hawthorn hedge" (Glover). These were splendid numbers widely divergent in character, and were handled in true musicianly style. A very pleasing feature of the rendering of "Love's Coronation" by Mrs. VanLoven, was the violin obligato, played with great expression by Mr. Collins. The audience demanded a repetition of this number. Miss Pearl Grieve sang two pretty songs, "Whisper and I shall hear" and "My Ain folk" in very sweet manner revealing the possession of a voice of real quality.

A very important part of the programme was supplied by a double quartette of ladies voices, Mesdames Herrington, Wartman and Fisher, and Misses Herring, Grieve, Williams, French and Mantel, who provided pleasant variety in three well arranged part songs, "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Last Night" and "Oft in the Stilly night," and along with Messrs Collins, Wiseman, Fisher and Chenoweth, a spirited rendering of "Scots Wha hae". A mixed voice quartette, composed of Mrs. VanLoven, Miss Mantel and Messrs Collins and Fisher, sang "In this hour of softened splendour" and the ever welcome "Loch Lomond" to the evident delight of the audience.

The accompaniments throughout were played by Mrs. Lockridge in her best style. Further commendation is not necessary.

The committee of the baseball club wish to tender their warmest thanks to all who assisted in this fine concert, which is voted to be the best presented by local talent for a very long time.

The Rev. Mr. Dibb, on very short notice, kindly attended and gave an address of encouragement to the members of the club.

THE HIGH WATER.

In a report dealing with the present high water in Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence river the United States Lake Survey ascribes the unusual conditions to four causes: An abnormal rainfall in the Ontario basin; the choking of the lower St. Lawrence with ice which held back the water; the building of the international dam at the head of the Galloup rapids, between Big Island and Prison Island, which closed one of the river's natural outlets, and the largely increased flow entering from the Niagara river, due to the high stage of Lake Ontario.

Lake Ontario shows the highest April stage since 1886, when it was five inches higher. It is fourteen inches higher than last year, a foot higher than in 1901, twenty-three inches above its average April stage for the past ten years, and thirty-eight inches higher than in April, 1895.

Lake Ontario will probably go on rising until July; and by that time be four inches higher than during April. Excessive rainfall may make this rise six inches or a foot. After July it should recede, reaching the April stage in September.

Coughs, colds, hoarseness, and other throat ailments are quickly relieved by Cresolene Tablets, ten cents per box. All druggists.

HEADS CUT OFF.

The Whitney government came into power in February, 1905, and a careful review of the Ontario Gazette, the official organ of the province for that year will reveal the astounding fact that in the ten and a half months, following the taking of office by the Whitney government, there were no less than 902 appointments to office by the government, exclusive of coroners, justices of the peace, notaries public, and commissioners for taking affidavits. This, notwithstanding, that there were only thirty-five vacancies from death or other normal causes. The wholesale nature of the dismissals is shown in the fact that the decapitation included:

- 105 boards of license commissioners.
- 76 division court clerks.
- 117 division court bailiffs.
- 76 license inspectors.
- 6 provincial license inspectors.
- 38 police magistrates.
- 6 registrars of deeds.

In fact it has been stated that in that year, not one week passed without the government dismissing some official to make way for its friends to get a cinch on the plums of office.

The government has been in power three years and a couple of months and, to-day, there are 113 more officials than there were on December 31st, 1901. There are now 817 civil servants in the province, 321 of whom are appointees of the Whitney government.

The bicycle saves time and money and puts you on the highway to economy. For the odd message to the store or into town, for a hurry call or important engagement, the wheel solves the problem.

Dimly I could distinguish his short, sturdy form between myself and the faint light of the half-opened blinds. But even though all was as yet misty and indistinct, I knew that what had been averted was the actual truth—the stenographers had been mistaken. With care and continued treatment my sight would strengthen until I became like other men.

"I can see!" I cried excitedly. "I can see you, doctor—and the light—and the blinds!"

"Then you acknowledge that what I told you was the truth—that I did not lie to you when I told you that your case was not beyond recovery?"

"Certainly. You told me the truth," I said hastily. "At the time it seemed too improbable, but now that you have shown me proof, I must ask your pardon if any words of mine have given you offence."

"You've not offended me in the slightest, my dear sir," he answered pleasantly. "Persevere with the treatment, and continue for another few days in darkness, and then I will tell you that you and movements. Indeed, in those first days of the recovery of my vision I went about London in cabs and omnibuses. Hither and thither, with all the enthusiasm of a country cousin or a child on his first visit to the Metropolis. All was novel and interesting on my return to a knowledge of life.

Stade, I found, was a gentlemanly fellow with the air of a clever physician, but all my efforts to discover his abode proved unavailing, and, moreover, just as the cure was complete he one day failed to call as usual. Without word he relinquished me just as suddenly as he had come; but he had restored to me that precious sense which is one of God's chief gifts.

In those September days, when all the world seemed gay and bright, I went forth into the world with a new zest for life. I took short trips to Richmond and Hampton Court, so that I might again gaze upon the green trees, the winding river, and the fields that I loved so well; and I spent a day at Brighton, and stood for a full couple of hours watching the rolling sea beat upon the beach. Six weeks before was not in want of money, therefore, ere I returned to Tewkesbury, and thence to London, I gave orders for certain necessary repairs to be done, and that a couple of rooms might be cleared and kept in readiness for my use whenever I might require them.

How strange it all was! At every turn I peered upon the world through my grey glass spectacles, and took as keen an interest in it as does a child. All seemed new to me; my brain, like a child's, became filled with new impressions and fresh ideas. After my dull, colorless existence of sound and touch, this bright life of movement filled me with a delight that pen cannot describe. Imagine, however, what joy it is to one who has been pronounced incurably blind to look upon the world again and taste of its pleasures. It was that joy which gave lightness to my heart.

Yet over all was one grim shadow—the remembrance of that fateful night with its grim tragedy. Who was Edna? Where was she? What was she?

Through her instrumentality I had regained my sight, but her identity and her whereabouts still remained hidden, as she had plainly told me they would be before we had parted.

Hither and thither I went, feted and feasted by my friends at the Savage, the Devonshire, and other clubs, yet my mind was ever troubled by the mystery of the woman who had, from motives that were entirely hidden, exerted herself on my behalf, first in saving my life from unscrupulous assassins, and, secondly, in restoring my vision.

I entertained a strong desire to meet her, to grasp her small hand, to thank her. I longed to see her.

CHAPTER X.

The man who abandons all hope is constantly haunted by fears. This is as strange as it is unjust, like much else in our everyday life. Even though there had returned to me all the joys of existence, yet I was still haunted by an ever-present dread—a terror lest some terrible mandate should suddenly be launched upon me by the unknown director of my actions.

My situation was, to say the least, a most extraordinary one. Valiantly I strove to rid myself of the obsession which constantly crept upon me whenever my attention was not actually distracted by the new existence that had so mysteriously been opened up to me. For a little while I would let my mind dwell upon the terrifying thought that I was entirely helpless in the hands of one who was, without doubt, unscrupulous. I had pledged my honor to keep secret that appalling midnight crime, and to act always as directed. Edna herself, the woman whose voice sounded so tender, whose hands were so small and soft to the touch, had forced me to this. To her alone was due this state of constant anxiety as to what might next be demanded of me. The thought would creep upon me, now pausing, now advancing, until at length it wrapped me round and round, and stifled out my breath, like a death-mask of cold clay. Then my heart would sink, my sight seemed to die, even sound would die until there seemed an awful void—the void of death for ever and for ever dumb, a dreadful, conquering silence.

A thousand times I regretted that I had in that moment of my utter helplessness given my promise to conceal the mysterious crime. Yet, when I recollected with what extraordinary ingenuity I had been deceived by the man whom I had believed to be a police-constable, the deep cunning which had been displayed in obtaining from my lips a statement of all the facts I knew, and the subsequent actions of the cool-headed Edna, my mind became confused. I could see no solution of the extraordinary problem, save that I believed her to be deeply implicated in some plot which had culminated in the murder of the young man, and that she herself had some strong personal motive in concealing the terrible truth.

life epithets regarding those who disagreed with him.

As he sat at the head of his table, his habitual monocle in his eye, and the tiny green ribbon of the order of the Crown of Italy in the lappel of his dining-jacket, he looked a perfect type of the ex-attache. His wife, a rather spare woman of fifty, who seemed to exist externally in a toilette of black satin and lace, was pleasant, though just a trifle stiff, probably because of her long association with other diplomats' wives; while Nellie Channing was a happy, fair-haired girl, who wore pretty blouses, cycled, golfed, flirted, and shopped in the High Street in the most approved manner of the average girl of South Kensington.

Nellie and I had always been good friends. She had been at school in England while her parents had been abroad, but on completing her education she had lived some five years or so in Vienna, and had thus acquired something of the cosmopolitan habit of her father. She looked charming in her pink blouse a trifle décolleté, as she sat on my left at dinner, and congratulated me upon my recovery.

SKIN ERUPTIONS AND PIMPLES

Disappear Under a Treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There can be health and vigor only when the blood is rich and red. There are thousands of young men just approaching manhood who need the rich, red blood that only Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can make. They have no energy; tire out at the least exertion, and who feel by the time they have done their day's work, as though the day was a week long. In some cases there is a further sign of danger in the pimples and disfiguring eruptions which break out on the face. These are certain signs that blood is out of order and that a complete breakdown may result. In this emergency Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the medicine these young men should take. These pills actually make rich, red blood. They clear the skin of pimples and eruptions and bring health, strength and energy.

Here is the experience of Adolphe Rolland, of St. Jerome, Que., who says: "For more than a year I suffered from general weakness, and I gradually grew so weak that I was forced to abandon my work as a clerk. My appetite failed me, I had occasional violent headaches and I began to suffer from indigestion. I was failing so rapidly that I began to fear that consumption was fastening itself upon me. Our family doctor treated me but I did not gain under his care. I was in a very discouraging state when a friend from Montreal came to see me. He strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and inside of three weeks I began to feel better, my appetite began to improve and I seemed to have a feeling of new courage. I continued the pills till I had taken ten boxes and I am now enjoying the best health I ever had. My cure surprised many of my friends who began to regard me as incurable, and I strongly advise other young men who are weak to follow my example and give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial." Bad blood is the cause of all common diseases like anaemia, headaches, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, indigestion, all nervous troubles, general weakness and the special ailments that only women folk know. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the one cure, because they go right to the root of the trouble in the blood. They change the bad blood into good blood, and thus bring health, strength and energy. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

I am sorry, but at the time it seemed too improbable, but now that you have shown me proof, I must ask your pardon if any words of mine have given you offence."

"You've not offended me in the slightest, my dear sir," he answered pleasantly. "Persevere with the treatment, and continue for another few days in darkness, and then I feel confident that a perfectly satisfactory cure will have been effected. Of course, we must not expect a clear vision at once, but by degrees your sight will slowly become stronger."

And with those words he closed the blinds and drew the curtains close, so that the room was again darkened.

Imagine the thankfulness that filled my heart! It was no illusion. I had actually seen the narrow rays of sunlight between the half-opened blinds and the dark silhouette of the short, stout, full-bearded man who was effecting such a marvellous cure.

I grasped his hand in the darkness, and thanked him.

"How can I sufficiently repay you?" I said. "This service you have rendered me has opened up to me an absolutely new life."

"I desire no repayment, Mr. Heaton," he answered in his deep, hearty voice. "That my treatment of malignant scrofulitis as successful, and that I have been the means of restoring sight to one of my fellow men is sufficient in itself."

"But I have one question I wish to ask you," I said. "The mode in which you were introduced to me is extremely puzzling. Do you know nothing of the lady named Edna?"

"I know her—that is all."

"Where does she live?"

"I regret that I am not able to answer your question."

"You are bound to secrecy regarding her?"

"I may as well admit the truth—I am."

"It's extra-singular," I ejaculated. "Very extraordinary!"

"No less extraordinary as the recovery of my eyes," he observed. "Remain with me a month, and don't take upon yourself any mental problems. A great deal may depend upon your own composure."

The fact that my sight was gradually returning to me seemed too astonishing to believe. The man Slade, whoever he was, had performed a feat in surgery which seemed to me impossible.

And now again I thanked him, but when he had gone and I had Parker, my own private physician, to consult, I had not a faint idea of what I had seen. I had seen a man named Slade, and the streaks of sunlight revealed that a cure was being effected.

What would Dick, dear old Dick, say when he returned when he found me cured? I laughed to myself as I thought of him, and at finding me at the railway station on his arrival—looking for him.

Through a white month Slade came night after night at noon, and surely by slow degrees my vision became strengthened, until at length I found that, even though I wore smoke-darkened glasses, I could see dimly, as well as I had done in the days of my youth. The glasses destroyed all colour, it was true, yet I could now go forth into the busy Strand, mingling with the bustling crowds, and read in their life forth into the world with a new zest for life. I took short trips to Richmond and Hampton Court, so that I might again gaze upon the green trees, the winding river, and the fields that I loved so well; and I spent a day at Brighton, and stood for a full couple of hours watching the rolling sea beating upon the beach. Six weeks before I was a hopeless misanthrope whose life had been utterly sapped by the blighting affliction upon me. Now I was strong and healthy in mind and in body, prepared to do anything or to go anywhere.

When Parker was at last forced to admit that I was no longer blind, she declared that the man Slade was an emissary of the Evil One, and expressed a pious hope that he would never "darken my door" again.

It was a fancy of mine to go down to the home of my youth, Heaton Manor, a place well known to those acquainted with the district around Tewkesbury. The great old mansion, standing in the centre of a wide, well-wooded park that slopes down to the Severn close to the Haw Bridge, had been closed, and in the hands of the old servant Baxter and his wife. Indeed I had never lived there since, on my father's death, it had passed into my possession. The rooms were opened for my inspection, and as I wandered through them and down the long oak-paneled gallery, from the walls of which rows of my time-dimmed ancestors, in their ruffles, velvets, and lace looked down solemnly, a flood of recollections of my sunny days of childhood crowded upon me.

Seven years had passed since my last visit there. The old ivy-covered manor was, indeed, dilapidated, and sadly out of repair. The furniture and hangings in many of the rooms seemed rotting with damp and neglect, and as I entered the nursery, and was shown my own boys, it seemed as though, like Rip Van Winkle, I had returned again to life after a long absence.

Alone, I wandered in the park down the avenue of grand old elms. The wide view across the brimming river, with Hasfield Church, and the old Tithe Barn at Chaceley standing prominent in the landscape, I saw that it had in no way changed. I looked back upon the houses—a grand old home it was, one that any man might have been proud of, yet of what use was it to me? Should I sell it? Or should I allow it to still rot and decay until my will became proved, and it passed into the hands of my heirs and assigns?

I felt loth to part with it, for the old place had been built soon after the fierce and historic battle had been fought at Tewkesbury, and ever since Richard Heaton had commanded one of the frigates, which went forth to meet the Armada it had been the ancestral home of the Heatons. Indeed, the village of Water Heaton, now-a-days quite an ancient place, with its little squat square-roofed church and quaint straggling street, had sprung up around the manor. To me the place was something of a white elephant, yet, as the last of a stalwart race who had ever rendered loyal service to their sovereign, and the sole descendant of an honorable family, it seemed incumbent upon me to retain it, and not allow it to go under the auctioneer's hammer. My personal needs were small, and I

Edna, my mind became confused. I could see no solution of the extraordinary problem, save that I believed her to be deeply implicated in some plot which had culminated in the murder of the young man, and that she herself had some strong personal motive in concealing the terrible truth.

I ought, I knew, to have gone to Scotland Yard and made a full and straightforward deposition of the whole matter. Nevertheless, my story was a very strange one—stranger, perhaps, than of the many curious romances which are daily laid before the Director of Criminal Investigations. After all, it might not have been believed. I had no idea where the scene of the tragedy was situated, and, having been slighted at the time, had actually witnessed nothing. Theory upon theory I formed, but when I dug down to their roots I found that they merely drew their strength from my own fear or imagination, and were utterly worthless. Once or twice I contemplated disregarding my promise and making a full statement to the police; but on calm reflection I saw that such a course was now absolutely useless. Two months had elapsed since the fateful night, and the body—or bodies—had, without doubt, been disposed of long ago. Such ingenious criminals would exert the utmost care in the disposition of the corpse direct, and would never run risk of detection. They feared me, I felt assured, and it was this thought which constantly harassed me for if such were actually the case, then they had every incentive to take my life on the well-established principle that dead men tell no tales.

With the return of my vision my sense of hearing had, curiously enough, become both weakened and distorted. Sounds which I heard when blind presented quite a different impression now that I could see. The blind hearer whose those with eyesight can detect nothing. The ears of the former train themselves to act as eyes also, yet the moment the vision is recovered the sharpened sense of hearing again assumes its normal capacity. Hence I found that I could not now distinguish voices and sounds so quickly as before; indeed the voices of those about me sounded a very different now that I had recovered my sight.

My friends, into whose circle they declared I had returned like one from the grave, welcomed me everywhere, and I confess that, notwithstanding the oppression constantly upon me, I enjoyed myself to the top of my bent. I still remained in my dingy, smoke-grimed rooms in Essex Street, really more for Parker's sake than for my own, and also, of course, in order to be near Dick when he returned, but nearly every evening I was out somewhere or other, going here and there about town.

I had long ago been a member of the Devonshire, and had now returned, and spent a good deal of time there, even though the main distinction of the club was the number of old fogies who affected it. But I found it a conveniently central place to dine and idle away any hours of the day that I had to spare.

In the middle of October, when most men I knew were away on the moors, I had a dinner engagement one evening with the Channings, in Cornwall Gardens. Colonel Channing, a retired officer of the Guards, was a man I had known during the greater part of my lifetime. His service had been mainly of a diplomatic character, for he had served as British military attaché at Berlin and Vienna, and now lived with his wife and daughter in London, and seemed to divide his time mainly between the St. James's and the United Service Clubs. He was a merry old fellow, with white hair and moustache and a florid complexion, the dandified air of attaché still clinging to him. His courtesy was distinctive, save when in the heat of argument upon European affairs—of which he prided himself on his extensive and peculiar knowledge—he would use strong and rather im-

Up to this Spring I was bothered for almost five years with a red rash, small pimples and sores on my face and on the scalp thro' the hair. This salve has effectually and I believe permanently taken off those unsightly pimples and sores from both scalp and face. I shall recommend Zam-Buk to all my friends."

EARLY RISING DANGERS.

French Medical Man Says it Leads to Madness.

It will be comforting to many lazy people to know that the shock of immediate rising in the morning may produce insanity, and that the wakeful rest in bed is necessary for one's health before getting up.

This great truth has long been recognized by thousands of people, but it remains for Dr. Savary, the Parisian scientist, to give it scientific corroboration.

The members of the French Academy of Sciences nearly smiled recently when Dr. Savary warned them of the grave dangers arising from immediate rising.

The strenuous business man who is called at an early hour, and bolts from his bed to his bath as soon as he opens his eyes, renders himself liable to a number of ailments, including madness.

According to Dr. Savary, it is absolutely necessary for every one to rest in bed at least twenty minutes after being called before getting up.

GROWN UP WITH HIM.

An Irishman was in trouble about a gun found in his possession. The law, unfortunately for him, adopted the unkind suggestion that he had stolen it.

While awaiting his trial, he was visited by a friend, who urged him to steadfastly adhere to the statement that he had owned the gun for years. The friend, furthermore, cited how he himself, when in similar difficulty about a hen, had preserved both the hen and his character by swearing he had possessed the bird since it was a chicken.

The wisdom of this advice was not lost on Pat, and he henceforth regarded his trial with the settled serenity of, if not conscious innocence, sanguine anticipation.

On the day appointed, when conclusive evidence against him had been tendered, he was asked formally whether he had anything to say for himself. Pat throwing a glance of shrivelling contempt at the prosecutor, turned to the judge and said:

"The man's a perjured villain, yer honor. That gun's bin in my possession, yer honor, iver since it was a pistol."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator does not require the help of any purgative medicine to complete the cure. Give it a trial and be convinced.

The young girls' air was pensive. "To-morrow," she said. "Reginald will conduct me to the altar. There," she added, smilingly, "his leadership will end."

POLICE SPIES IN PARIS.

Legitimist Leader Mystified Over a Revelation by Prefect Lepine.

Paris Gil Blas gives the world an illustration of the workings of the French secret police in an anecdote which it publishes with an assurance that the incident happened recently.

A distinguished member of Parisian society sent out invitations for a large soiree at his house in the Faubourg St. Germain. He is a legitimist, and it was hardly concealed that the gathering was to have a certain political significance.

As soon as he heard of it Police Prefect Lepine called upon the host and with the utmost politeness solicited a couple of invitations for agents on his staff.

"Monsieur le Comte," said he, "I give you my word of honor the men to whom I entrust them will look like perfect gentlemen; they will act like gentlemen; in a word, they will be worthy of the honor you confer on them by making them your guests."

The Count was very haughty, however. He explained with ill concealed disdain that his party would be made up of the bluest blood in France and any outsider would be at once conspicuous.

M. Lepine appeared to be convinced; at least he yielded the point gracefully, merely adding: "At least, Monsieur le Comte, you will allow me to see the list of your guests. My duty compels me to know who will be there."

Monsieur le Comte made no objection. He produced the list and Lepine scanned it carefully. He was wreathed in smiles as he returned it. With many bows he apologized for having troubled Monsieur le Comte.

"It was so unnecessary," said he. "I really would have no use for those invitations. I see that Monsieur le Comte already has on his list of guests the names of five of my most trusted observers."

The Count and his friends have been wondering ever since whether this was literally true or whether it was a shrewd device to render the gathering innocuous.

SLEEPING DRAUGHTS

SOOTHING MIXTURES.

A wise mother will never give her little one a sleeping draught. Soothing mixture or opiate of any kind except upon the advice of a competent doctor, who has seen the child. All these things contain deadly poison. When you give your baby or young child Baby's Own Tablets you have the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or narcotic, and therefore cannot possibly do harm—but always do good. Mrs. Geo. M. Kempt, Carleton Place, Ont., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby since he was two weeks old. He was a very small baby, but thanks to the Tablets he is now a big, fat, healthy boy." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

They are Carefully Prepared.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome costiveness the medicine administered must influence the action of these canals. Parmedee's Vegetable Pills are so made, under the supervision of experts, that the substance in them intended to operate on the intestines is retarded in action until they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

ANY remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves.

The nerve centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerve centers become anemic, and indigestion is the result.

Peruna is not a nervine nor a stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion.

Peruna frees the stomach of catarrhal congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Peruna goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant street, Watonsville, Cal., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors.

"They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months.

"I improved under the treatment, but as soon as I stopped taking the medicine, I got bad again.

"I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured.

"I have gained in strength and feel like a different person. I believe Peruna is all that is claimed for it."

Nervines, such as coal-tar preparations, are doing a great deal of harm. Sleep medicines and headache powders are all alike,—heart depressants, and should not be used. The nerves would be all right, if the digestion were good. Peruna cures the digestion.

A sailor, who had retired to spend the rest of his life in the country, was very proud of his watch, which, for nearly thirty years, had never once gone wrong. Early one morning he roused a visitor, who was staying with him, and together they set out to see the sun rise.

The host kept consulting first his watch, and then a calendar, which gave the times of the sun's rising and setting. There was a long wait in the pale, vague dawn. Presently, tapping his watch with his forefinger, the sailor said:

"If the sun ain't over that hill in a minute and a half, he'll be late."

AN ARCTIC ROMANCE.

A pathetic tale of Esquimaux love is told by Lieut. Shackleton, the leader of an Arctic expedition. A young Esquimaux loved an Esquimaux lass, but as he had not the necessary number of sealskins to provide the marriage portion required by her father he met with no encouragement from the stern parent. A yawning chasm separated the respective dwellings of the ardent lover and his beloved, which could be crossed only by a snow bridge. The youth conceived a plan. He would cross the snow bridge in the night, abduct the girl and after recrossing destroy the bridge and so prevent pursuit. He carried the plan into effect. One night he crossed the bridge, invaded the hut of his idol, seized a sleeping bag and departed, destroying the bridge after he had crossed. Then he opened the sleeping bag and discovered that he had abducted—not the girl, but the old man!

TO SAVE THE DROWNING

Surgeon Advocates Cutting Open the Chest and Working the Heart by Hand.

A despatch from Hartford, Conn., says: It is believed by Dr. D. F. Sullivan, who, while operating on Nuncio C. Chial at St. Francis' Hospital on Sunday, twice saved his patient from death by gently grasping the heart and squeezing it in time with its normal pulsations until it beat again of its own accord, that many lives might be saved by this method of artificial respiration. To all appearances the man was dead twice, and yet he lived again when the heart was squeezed, sending the blood coursing through the arteries.

Dr. Sullivan thinks that if a person could be operated upon immediately after being taken from the water in many drowning cases life might be conserved. He advocates opening the body and removing the ribs until the heart is visible and is accessible, in order that the figures may be inserted to handle it. In many accidents life still lingers long after the person seems to have ceased to breathe.

Fashion Hints.

HATS VARY WIDELY IN STYLE.

Hats this season are far from becoming to the average woman. The exaggerated crowns, the narrowness of the brims and the severe modish trimmings belong to few types of women. A very small high crowned hat is rarely ever becoming, but at present the small hats are so heavy and thick looking that a woman of even medium height looks buried under their clumsy weight.

Since the bandeau has become a thing of the past, it is almost impossible to give a hat that airy buoyancy that in so many instances was the very life of it.

A noticeable feature in the new models for early summer is the babyfied arrangement of trimmings. The lace frill under the brim falling over the fluffy expanse is growing in favor with the woman who seeks to be youthful and picturesque.

Sometimes long silk or mull ties are added, when they are tied in a bewitching bow under the left ear. The baby hat, taken as a whole, is decidedly English, hence it is best suited to delicate features framed in an abundance of carefully arranged hair.

Chaudron is one of the most popular tones in millinery. This is an exquisite shade of brown that is becoming to almost any complexion and goes nicely with any color.

Cerise and jockey green have lost little of their early favor, but either shade is trying, save with a woman possessing unusually clear skin. Chaudron harmonizes with either color and is frequently seen in combination with cerise or green when the foundation of the hat is of the dull hue.

There are, however, some superb chapeaus of cerise straw garnished with flowers of many shades. The red is bright enough to dominate everything it meets and the mixed colors shown in the flowers soften its fire to becomingness.

La France roses in their rich warm color have returned to favor. They are arranged in great bunches falling in all directions over the crown and brim. Height is given to the hat trimmed with roses by a big cluster of agrettes or pointed wings.

Shaded parrots' wings are among the newest effects in novel trimmings.

Quills from the South American cockatoo are very modish. They are found in all colors and many lengths; some are curled at the ends to represent the lyre tail, while others are pointed or clipped some fancy shape.

The smartest of the quills are extreme.

past her first youth with florid complexion selects the giddy sailor for her general utility chapeau she not only makes herself conspicuous, but her age is made the point of free discussion by her acquaintances.

The fashionable sailor in its regal form has its crown piled and heaped with costly garnitures. A small chip sailor seen a few days ago had a deep wreath of pink and purple primroses and Russian violets hugging the crown. At the side of this there was a huge bunch of white agrettes.

One of the sensational ways of wearing the swell spring hat is to have it jammed down over the head in a way to obscure one side of the face. Hats worn in this odd manner are of moderate size, with left side of the brim rolling abruptly and high.

Wide bands of foliage are seen on many of the trimmings of small hats.

A becoming model seen recently was of light green straw, the high tumble crown encircled with a band of shaded hyacinths. Resting at the high turned side was a cluster of soft feathers sprigged at the ends with colored disks. The underbrim was faced with turquoise blue silk, which banded most attractively with the soft pinks and blues of the crown trimming.

Another hat of similar shape and style was trimmed with a deep band of pansies looking natural enough to pluck. At the right side of the brown crown was a big bow of purple and old rose velvet ribbon, wired to the ends of the loops and arranged in standing position.

In many cases, however, the mixed floral wreaths provide fetching contrast. The colored straws that have lately sprung into favor are shown in Panamas and Leghorns as well as in fancy braids. Fruit is one of the popular decorations with the milliner, who, regardless of the early months, has brought out autumn berries and colored leaves.

On one or two extremes have been seen tiny tomatoes half hidden in quantities of natural-looking vines and leaves. Let it be hoped that the style does not further develop or we shall be obliged to adopt artichokes and salads in order to follow the edicts of Mme. la Mode.

Their Canoe Caught in a Current in the Rideau River.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Chas. P. Gumble, aged 18, a junior reporter of the Ottawa Citizen, and Aubrey Monk, aged 11, both residents of Ottawa South, were drowned at Black Rapids, on the Rideau River on Sunday morning while on their way home from a fishing trip. Two other lads, Geo. Monk, aged 17, and Audo Lewis, aged 14, composed the party which started out on Saturday afternoon on an expedition after muskellunge. They had good sport and fished for the night above the rapids. After

CHLOROSIS.

This is a peculiar form of anaemia which occurs in young women, generally between the ages of fifteen and twenty. If it is found after the age of twenty-five it is a relapse from a former attack. It is characterized by a yellowish green tint of the skin, and from this it receives its name. In any case of anaemia where there is a doubt of the diagnosis, an examination of the blood itself will soon settle the question.

The blood of the chlorotic patient will invariably be deficient in hemoglobin, which is the coloring-matter of the red corpuscles and the carrier of oxygen to the system. While in other forms of anaemia the red corpuscles may be found greatly decreased in quantity, in chlorosis they will be found in sufficient number, but poor in quality.

As it is the hemoglobin in the blood which enables one to breathe, it follows—as a matter of course—that any deficiency in it will affect the breathing power, and therefore the supply of necessary oxygen which comes to the system. The chlorotic patient therefore lives in continual bad air wherever she is and her whole system suffers accordingly.

The whole muscular system of course suffers, because muscular force is in direct ratio to the amount of oxygen taken in. The heart muscle will be weak and irritable, and there will be a sense of breathlessness and probably palpitation following any exertion. As the entire system of muscles is affected, there will naturally be a sense of fatigue and lassitude, with pain at the base of the neck and in the small of the back.

The peculiar color is absent in certain cases, although it may declare itself on the backs of the hands and on the ears or the chest, when it is not noticeable on the face except as an ordinary pallor.

Another symptom that will usually be found in the sufferer from chlorosis is puffiness of the face and swelling of the ankles. There may also be a persistent dry cough, worse at night, or coming on after long talking.

As to the treatment of this condition, iron in some form or another may be said to be a specific, but must, of course, be regulated by the physician in charge, both as to the form of iron to be taken and the quantity.

There should be careful attention to general hygiene. Plenty of time should be spent in the open air, but fatiguing exercise should not be attempted until the muscles have regained their tone and common sense should be exercised as to hours of study, diet and sleep.—Youth's Companion.

HEALTH HINTS.

Take plenty of sleep. Time spent in sound sleep is never wasted. The fewer hours of sound sleep we get the more rest in bed we should take.

Juicy fruits are rich in phosphates for the blood, and are easily digested as well. Nuts form another of Nature's foods, and much nourishment is contained in them.

To remove proud flesh from cut, burn, or wound, cover with sugar on retiring. All the proud flesh will disappear by morning, and the wound will heal up rapidly.

Walking is the very best tonic that can be presented for exhausted brains, weakened muscles, and worn-out nerves; it strengthens the digestive organs, drives the blood away from the tired brain, and is one of the best remedies for nervousness.

When a person has an injured foot or arm and cannot stand the weight of covering when lying in bed take a large hoop and cut in half, then cross the two halves and tie in centre with a

Shaded parrots' wings are among the newest effects in novel trimmings.

Quills from the South American cockatoo are very modish. They are found in all colors and many lengths; some are curled at the ends to represent the lyre tail, while others are pointed or clipped some fancy shape.

The smartest of the quills are extremely long and shoot up like whips from the side of the crown or from the bent brim when the quills are thrust through the straw. Many of the best feathers of this class measure three-quarters of a yard from the top of the crown. Coarse fabrics and parrots' quills are being used to great extent for trimming outing hats, such as rough straws and Panamas. The effect is always simple, but striking.

One of the handsomest outing hats imaginable is of very coarse straw in chamois brown; the brim extends at the sides to prodigious dimensions, and the front is chopped off about three inches from the crown.

The crown is rather high and of thumb shape and the garnishments consist of a coarse serim scarf with strip of oriental embroidery through the centre; this is draped loosely about the crown, and from the centre of the knot shoot two long, shaded quills in rose-pink and changeable green.

Big, flat shapes bent and draped in all sorts of ways are among the favorites. Poke styles of old-time savor are made of these flats and prettily trimmed with June roses and black velvet ribbons. Another attractive arrangement is to cover a band of ribbon with tiny roses or place them in garland effect, then drape the tall crown with the ribbon. Ribbon ties are fastened under the brim and tie under the hair at the back.

Still another fetching way for trimming the big flat or poke hat is tied down at the sides with narrow ribbons of satin-faced velvet in black or color and a huge rose with foliage set across the front of the crown. Width effects are also much liked for poke or flat shapes.

Sometimes two wreaths of small flowers trim the crown or the outline of it. Hardly a flower trimming is considered complete without the addition of a velvet bow, and usually this is made to look as though it had been sadly crushed before it was placed on the hat.

The sailor hat never returns to favor that it does not bring in its wake some of the most impossible trimming arrangements. Disaster falls when the woman of middle age or a trifle past chooses a broad-trimmed sailor with projecting sides, and has her milliner decorate it with spectacular quills and garish ribbons or Persian scarf.

The sailor of the present season is unusually well adapted to the very young face, and when a woman well discovered at Black Rapids on the Rideau River on Sunday morning while on their way home from a fishing trip. Two other lads, Geo. Monk, aged 17, and Aedus Lewis, aged 14, composed the party which started out on Saturday afternoon on an expedition after maskinonge. They had good sport and tented for the night above the rapids. After fishing for a while on Sunday morning they packed up and started for home. Lewis, who had a presentiment that something was going to happen, would not enter the canoe, but started to walk home. The other three lads paddled down stream, intending to portage round the rapids, but their canoe was caught in the swift water and carried over the weir adjacent to the Black Rapids lock, a drop of about 13 feet. Geo. Monk swam to shore, but Gamble and the younger Monk were, it is thought, hurled against the heavy timbers and drowned. The bodies have been recovered.

OIL FUEL FOR THE NAVY

British Experts Will Look For it in Canada.

A despatch from New York says: On the steamship St. Louis, which arrived from Southampton on Sunday were Major J. D. D. Graham, formerly of the British army, and Mr. J. D. Henry, an English oil expert, who are going to Canada to look over the Dominion oil fields to ascertain their capability of furnishing fuel oil for the British navy. "The British Admiralty," said Major Graham, "has used a great deal of American oil from the Texas fields, transporting it in its own tank steamers, and its marine experts, believing that oil is to be the naval fuel of the future, have determined to locate every supply that can be found in the British colonies. Our idea in seeking for our own supplies under our own control is the possibility that if war were to break out, it might be declared contraband of war, and Great Britain's navy, without a supply of the new fuel controlled at home, would be in a serious plight."

Northern Electric Co. Gets Contract For Material for 700 Miles.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alberta, says: A contract for 700 miles of long-distance telephone material has been awarded by the Public Works Department to the Northern Electric Company of Montreal and Winnipeg. CATTLE MARKET.

Toronto, May 19.—No material change was noticeable in the live stock situation at the City Cattle Market. The trade in the commoner grades was, if anything, a trifle slower, as a large proportion of the offerings were of this class. Only a few cattle suitable for export were on sale, and these were not of any very fancy quality. The highest price paid was around $6. Export bulls brought from $4.50 to $5. Good cattle for butchering are most in demand, and bring as good prices as export cattle. Cows and bulls are steady.

Very few stockers and feeders are being marketed now, as most of the farmers are able to put them on the grass. A load of short-keep feeders to go to pasture for finishing up sold as high as $5.65.

There is a steady demand for good milk cows, which will fetch from $40 to $60.

The heavy run of calves has caused a break of half a cent in the price, and the market for them was very slow. Sheep and lambs are firm, and the best are bringing slightly higher prices. Although not many hogs are offering, they are not wanted, and the market for them is weak at $6, fed and watered, off cars, Toronto.

Immigration Department Issues Notice Specifying Classes Wanted.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The superintendent of immigration issued a notice on Thursday that the only classes of immigrants wanted in Canada at the present time are experienced farm laborers, farmers financially able to take homesteads or purchase lands, and female domestic servants. The demand for railway labor is filled for this season. All concerned are requested to note that the regulation now in operation in Canada requiring every immigrant 18 years of age or over, to have in his possession at least $25 cash at the time of landing, besides ticket to destination, will be enforced strictly and impartially in the case of all immigrants outside of the classes above mentioned.

Hot water is a greater medical factor than many believe, or know. For instance, half a pint of hot water, just as hot as it is possible to drink, taken just before rising in the morning will ease obstinate cases of indigestion, and the simple remedy is more widely recommended by the medical profession.

Sufferers from rheumatism should dress entirely in woolen clothing, and dust the inside of their clothing with flowers of sulphur. They should abstain from taking beer, acids, sweets, sugar, or pastry, but should take plenty of milk, celery stewed in milk (or prepared in other ways), and onions. They should rub the joints night and morning with a brine of salt, rubbing it in until the skin is dry. Turkish baths do much good to rheumatic persons, but, being a severe remedy, should never be tried without first consulting a medical man, or the result may be most injurious.

HOSPITAL NURSE KILLED.

Leaped From Carriage in Front of Engine at London.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Miss Sarah Rowet, a nurse at Victoria Hospital, was instantly killed on Friday night at 10.30 at the Grand Trunk crossing at Egerton Street. She, with Charles Cowan and Miss Sutherland, another nurse, were returning from a drive, to Dorchester and, notwithstanding the efforts of the signalman to notify them of the approach of a train, they drove on the track unaware of danger. As they drove on the tracks Miss Rowet became so thoroughly unnerved for the moment from sheer fright that she jumped and fell directly in front of the engine. Her remains were mangled almost beyond recognition, the engineer being unable to stop the heavily loaded train in time to avoid the fatality. The other occupants of the rig escaped unhurt as the horse made a leap and dragged the carriage from the track a few inches ahead of the engine.

OUTRAGES ON NON-UNION MEN.

Stones Hurlled Through Windows of Houses at Brantford.

A despatch from Brantford says: Violence continues in connection with the strike of moulders at the Buck stove works in this city. Attacks by unknown parties were made at midnight on Thursday night on two houses occupied by men who have replaced strikers at the factory. Considerable damage was done, but no one was injured. At the house of Charles Boyes, a non-union man, Campbell Street, six men at 11.45 o'clock on Thursday night, made an assault, throwing large stones through windows, smashing glass, and doing slight damage inside. A child, asleep in a crib, narrowly escaped being struck by a stone, which landed four inches away from it. A similar attack was made at a later hour on a house occupied by an apprentice, Red Eastman, at the corner of West and Clarence Streets, where stones broke all the windows, and, crashing against the walls, almost fell upon sleeping children.

PRISONERS SLAUGHTERED

Desperate Attempt to Break Out of a Russian Jail Frustrated.

A despatch from Yekaterinoslav, Russia, says: The attempt made on Tuesday by prisoners to break out of the Government jail here after making a breach in the wall of the guardroom with a bomb was a complete failure, but it brought about a horrible scene of slaughter in and around the jail building. Twenty-eight of the prisoners were shot to death by the guard, and another of them has since died of his wounds. Thirty others were wounded, and it is expected that several of these will succumb.

As soon as the bomb was thrown one of the detachments of prisoners charged the guards in the court room and attempted to climb the wall. Twelve of these men were killed instantly, while others were wounded. At the same time a second body of prisoners rushed into the kitchen and seizing knives and other weapons attempted to cut their way to liberty. They were surrounded and killed to a man by the soldiers, who were hastily summoned by the prison authorities.

The explosion threw the whole prison into a state of panic. The inmates who took no part in the plot gathered in the windows overlooking the courtyard. They were ordered to draw back, but refused, whereupon the guards fired volleys into the open windows. Two prisoners were shot down while attempting to escape over the roof of the building. So far as is known, not one succeeded in getting away. The chief warden of the prison is among the wounded.

Canada's Trade Figures for April Show a Falling Off.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Canadian trade figures for April show a continued falling off in imports, consequent upon the restriction during the early months of the year of orders by wholesalers for imported goods for the summer trade. It is expected, however, that with the present bright outlook for the revival of trade next Autumn the imports will again pick up in the course of a month or so, and the figures for the last half of the year will show a very considerable improvement over those of the first half. Total imports for last month were $20,201,409, a decrease of $8,133,878, as compared with April of last year. Exports of domestic products on the other hand show a slight increase, totalling $10,294,828, as compared with $9,751,849 for April last year. The grand total of Canadian trade for the month was $30,970,387, as compared with $40,725,969 for April, 1907.

RAILWAY SUES SALOONKEEPER.

Would Hold Him Liable for Losses Caused by Drunken Boys.

A despatch from Detroit, Mich., says: A novel suit has been begun here by the Pere Marquette Railroad against Andrew Healey, who runs a saloon on Third street near the Union depot used by the P. M. R., claiming $7,500 damages. Last July a P. M. freight train was derailed at Webberville, causing a heavy loss to the company. Investigation showed that a switch had been tampered with by two boys who were intoxicated. It was since learned the boys became intoxicated in Detroit on liquor sold them by Healey. The action is founded on a statute which makes saloonkeepers liable for damages resulting from their sale of liquor to minors.

SERIES OF ROBBERIES.

Large Sums of Money Stolen in Winnipeg Post-Office.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: A series of robberies extending over several months has been going on in the Winnipeg post-office, and the sum stolen aggregates a very large amount; it is believed not less than $12,000. Officials refuse to discuss the matter, and consequently it is impossible to ascertain the correct figures, but the sum cannot be less than stated. A number of packages, containing from $500 to $2,000 have disappeared as mysteriously within the building as though they had sunk into the ground, indicating that the thief is some person who has the handling of the money entrusted to him, and that he is clever and systematic in his operations.

SEARCH FOR THE VICTIMS

Work Is Continuing on the Laporte Murder Farm.

A despatch from Laporte, Indiana, says: The Guinness death farm on Thursday gave up more corroborative evidence as to the extent of the tragedies there. Two more watches were found in the debris of the ruined house, and these, taken in connection with nine previously discovered, show that a least one more person met death on the place. The bodies of nine male victims have been unearthed, but ten men's watches have been discovered. Sheriff Smutzer announced after the finding of Thursday that he will resume digging operations with the hope of uncovering additional skeletons.

A number of globules of metal found in the mining operations are being examined by experts to see whether they are bits of gold used by dentists for fillings or crowns of teeth.

The discovery of the supposed missing left hand of the body of Mrs. Guinness, with two rings that make its identification still more conclusive, leaves little room for doubt that the proprietress of the murder farm paid for her crime in her own house of death. The initials engraved inside the rings show conclusively that they belonged to Mrs. Guinness.

The attorneys for Lamphere are said to be looking for David Havens, who, it is reported, aided in uncovering the bodies of the persons whom Lamphere is accused of murdering.

The attorneys claim that Havens has declared that when the bodies were found in the cellar of the Guinness home on April 28 they were lying on the floor, and that there was no debris under them. They assert that testimony to this effect at the trial will do much to clear their client of the charges against him, arguing that the circumstances show that the bodies had been placed in the cellar previous to the beginning of the fire which destroyed the farmhouse.

DEATH OF MRS. BANNATYNE.

Widow of One of the Pioneer Settlers of Winnipeg.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Mrs. A. G. B. Bannatyne, widow of the most famous of the Red River settlers and founders of the present city of Winnipeg, died on Thursday after a brief illness. She was born in Fort Garry in 1830, being a daughter of an old fur trader, Mr. McDermott, and was married to Mr. Bannatyne in 1851. Her husband was a member of the provisional Government, and for years their home was the centre of life in and around Winnipeg.

YOUNG FOLKS

LITTLE WATER PEOPLE.

Uncle Henry was sitting by the kitchen fire, with Jessie on one knee and Tom on the other. There was a roaring fire in the stove, and by and by the big teakettle began to sing.

At first it was a soft, low humming, and then it rose to a sweet little song that sounded like some one whistling away off in the distance; and it kept getting louder and louder, as if he were coming nearer; and then it was almost like a scream, and the cover of the kettle began to bob up and down.

It was such a funny noise that Tom and Jessie both laughed.

"What makes the kettle sing that way? What does it make that noise for?" asked Jessie.

"Why," said Uncle Henry, "that is the Little Water People asking to be let out."

"The Little Water People!" cried both the children together. "What are they? Do they live in the teakettle? We never heard of them before."

"Well," said Uncle Henry, "I can't tell you what they look like, because nobody has ever seen them, but we know they are there because we see what they do."

"They are very funny Little People—so small that hundreds and hundreds of them can live in a teaspoonful of water and have plenty of room."

"Do they always live in the water?" asked Jessie.

"Yes, always in the water. When it is cold they keep perfectly still. They never sing or talk or shout then. But when the water begins to get hot, then the Little People rush around every way, trying to get out."

"If they find they are shut in, they begin to sing a little song, all together, in a tiny, piping voice: 'Oh, please let us out! It's very warm in here. Please let us out!' That song is very pretty to hear, because all the people are polite, and say please."

"But in a little while, if you don't do anything, they begin to shout in a louder voice: 'Let us out! Let us out! Let us out! Let us out!' And then the Little People begin to scream and climb up on each other's shoulders, and jump over each other, to get out."

"A few of them squeeze through under the lid of the teakettle, and others pass through the spout, but then they

A CHURCH ROBBER KILLED.

Was Stabbed to Death by Enraged Belgian Villagers.

A despatch from Courtrai, Belgium, says: Practically the whole population of the village of Belegem, a short distance from Courtrai, armed with clubs and stones, set on and killed a man who was caught in the act of burglarizing the famous Chapel of the Virgin on Tuesday. The villagers had been highly incensed at previous church robberies, notably that of the Church of Notre Dame in this city last December, when Van Dyke's masterpiece, "The Elevation of the Cross," was stolen. Several of those implicated in the killing of the burglar were arrested. Doctors who made an examination of the body found twenty-seven knife wounds.

Montague A. A. Smith, Ends His Life With a Pistol.

A despatch from Forest, Ont., says: Montague A. A. Smith, of the private banking firm of L. A. Smith and Company, of Forest, ex-chairman of the Ontario Fish and Game Commission, and widely known in western Ontario, committed suicide in the rear of his office about 8.30 on Thursday morning, in a fit of temporary aberration, which, in a letter, he attributed to the worries of his election campaign as Liberal candidate for East Lambton. There is an entire absence of any rumors affecting the standing of the deceased, socially and financially, and no man stood higher. He was admittedly the wealthiest resident of the vicinity, and his act was due to nervous breakdown. Profound regret is the expression of all.

The Earl will leave London early in June for Australia, where he is to take up the duties of Governor-General.

STOP BIRD SLAUGHTER.

Bill in House of Lords to Prevent Feather Importation.

A despatch from London says: With in object of checking the wanton slaughter of birds, Lord Avebury (Sir John Lubbock) introduced a bill in the House of Lords on Tuesday prohibiting the importation of plumage, except that of certain species of birds set forth in the bill. Lord Avebury pointed out that this measure was framed on the same lines as the New York State law on the subject. It enacts heavy penalties for contravention of the law. In a memorandum attached to the bill, Lord Avebury says that unless the British Parliament follows the example of the New York Legislature the extinction of the most beautiful species of bird life is only a question of time.

TROOP DISPLAY CURTAILED.

The Railways Could Not Ship 30,000 Men to Quebec.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The military display for the bicentenary at Quebec will be curtailed from 36,000 to 5,000 men because of the problems of transportation. Of these 5,000 men the permanent forces will furnish 1,200 and the city corps will make up the balance. To make the military assemblage a success it was the right necessary to mass the men at Quebec within two days, and to return them to their homes as promptly. Railroad authorities have agreed to do their best but would not undertake to deliver 30,000 men in Quebec in less than three or four days.

THE CANADIAN LOAF.

Why it is Larger Than Loaf Made From English Wheat.

A despatch from London says: At the rooms of the Royal Society, on Wednesday, Prof. T. B. Wood showed how a loaf made from English wheat was small compared with one made from Canadian wheat, because the yeast "grows" better and the gluten is more elastic in the Canadian product. Also, Canadian yeast emitted carbon dioxide at twice the rate English yeast did.

...Pigs that have become too fat by overfeeding will not be so good as breeders, as if they had not developed a tendency to lay on fat rather than to make growth, which will be reproduced in their kind.

Look well to the horse collars. See that they are wiped clean and dry every time they are taken off the horses. Keep them soft and pliable by frequent manipulations, and if they become too stiff to yield to such treatment, pound the face gently with a round stick.

Are you milking any cows that you don't know about, but have your doubts that they are putting much good money in your pocket? Find out about them by testing their milk and weighing it a few days, then act accordingly. Business is business, and keeping poor cows is very poor business.

The theory that oil meal is a detriment to a horse fattened upon it, is much like that other one, that you can catch a bird if you put salt on its tail. Oil meal is not used to fatten. It is a highly concentrated feed and may be given in small quantities only. It is very nourishing, keeps the bowels open and increases the appetite. Not more than half a pint should be fed daily.

The speedy horse is risky, takes much time and money for training, is practically of no use on the farm and so does not reduce his board bill. Moreover, trotting horses have a tendency to make jockeys of farmers' sons, who should only be breeders. Even if such horses bring a long figure, a narrow margin is left after the expense of raising them has been counted out. This is the record of the occasional fast horses that farmers breed.

Experienced poultrymen give more attention to keeping the floor of the poultry-house clean than they do to the food, as no amount of food will enable the hens to lay if they are not kept warm and busy, while if warm they will sometimes lay even if the food is only of the ordinary kind. Litter is clean, and there is no reason for neglecting its use. A strawutter should be kept, not only to cut straw for litter, but also to cut clover for the fowls. If the straw is cut in lengths of about six inches, it is all that is required, but leaves are superior to any other material.

POINTERS FOR CREAMERYMEN.

The butter-maker with a good nose is a winner.

The butter-maker has never been born yet who can make good butter out of poor cream.

Don't start in listening to any kind of excuse from a patron as to why his cream is poor.

Many creameries seem to go on the theory that if the other creamery can take in poor cream they can; they are liable to find they are mistaken.

...But in a little while, if you don't do anything, they begin to shout in a louder voice: Let us out! Let us out! Let us out! Let us out! And then the Little People begin to scream and climb up on each other's shoulders, and jump over each other, to get out.

"A few of them squeeze through under the lid of the teakettle, and others come through the spout; but they can't get out fast enough that way. They are like the boys over at Tommy's school, when they all try to get through the door at the same time."

"But what if you don't let them out? What do they do then?"

"Well, they all bend their heads down and get their backs and shoulders against the under side of the kettle cover, and press hard with their hands, and then they give a great shout and push all together, and lift the lid a little way. And every time they do that a lot of them get out."

"They are doing it now!" cried Jessie, eagerly, as the kettle cover bobbed up and down.

"Are they good or bad people?" asked Tommy.

"They are good," his uncle answered. "If they are shut up in strong iron prison-houses, where they cannot get out, they will work hard day and night. They are so strong when they work together that they can do more than a thousand men. It is these Little People of the water who pull all the big trains of cars and push all the steamboats."

"I wish I could see them or catch some of them," said Tommy; and before Uncle Henry could stop him, he had stretched his hand out to the teakettle cover. He drew it back very quickly.

"Yes," said Uncle Henry, "they are good, but sometimes we get in their way, and then they give us trouble. — Youth's Companion."

TEN THOUSAND DROWNED

Were Swept to Death By a Tidal Bore at Hankow, China.

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., says: News of one of the greatest disasters that China has known, a sudden tidal bore, in the Yangtsiekiang, which involves the loss of nearly 10,000 lives at Hankow, was brought by the steamer Titan, which arrived on Tuesday night. A bore twenty-six feet in height flooded without warning down the river, overwhelming thousands of junks, sampans and small boats, and wrecking some large river steamers.

Mr. Bell, agent of Butterfield & Swire at Yokohama, who arrived by the Blue Funnel liner, stated that the disaster has caused tremendous loss of life, far greater, it was estimated, than the great typhoon at Hong Kong of eighteen months ago, when ten thousand lives were snuffed out.

It is usual, said Mr. Bell, to send a telegram down the river when such a freshet occurs. The telegram was delayed, finally arriving about the same time as the wall of water, which swept down on the sleeping river people in the early morning, overturning thousands of craft, and sweeping away thousands of Chinese in the torrent that swept seaward. The scenes for many days after the disaster were horrible, the river side being strewn with dead and debris of wrecked craft for many miles.

to give some names, any instance in Manitoba or in British Columbia which would justify the interposition of this Parliament."

A little further on, upon the same page, Mr. Borden is quoted as saying:—"My hon. friend the Minister of Justice has not given any names of persons deprived of their votes."

Red Line Scandal a Myth.

This being the admission on the floor of Parliament by the leader of the Opposition, to wit, that no person from Manitoba had complained of being unjustly deprived of his vote, and the accompanying challenge to the Minister of Justice to name a man so deprived, what becomes of the contention that by the use of the thin red line upwards of ten thousand Conservative voters in Manitoba were disfranchised in the Dominion elections of 1904?

The Opposition cannot have their cake and eat it. They cannot keep alive their "thin red line scandal" and at the same time deny that any voter was disfranchised. They must either admit that no scandal or injustice resulted from the use of the thin line, or they must admit the necessity for an amendment to the election law.

Why Line Was Used.

The reasons for the "thin red line" have been explained many times. The Dominion constituencies in Manitoba are made up of portions of as many as ten local constituencies. For instance, the Dominion constituency of Macdonald consists of the whole of Dufferin and portions of Morris, Assiniboia, Rockwood, Gimli, Lakeside, Portage, Cypress, Manitow and Mountain. Therefore when the candidate sends to the Clerk of the Court in Chancery at Ottawa for the voters' list for Macdonald, he receives the entire voters' lists of every provincial constituency which may be in whole or in part within the boundaries of the Dominion constituency.

What must be done then? It is quite obvious that as only portions of some of the provincial constituencies are within the Dominion constituency, that as to those portions which overlap, the names of voters in the overlapping part must be stricken off, otherwise they could vote twice. They were stricken off with a "thin red line." The men whose names were thus stricken off were not disfranchised, they still remained in their proper voting sub-division.

Tories Did Same Thing.

The act of running a line through a name wrongfully on the voters' list is not confined to the Liberals, neither is it unrecognized by the Manitoba statutes. Sub-section 6 of section 65, cap. 52, of the Manitoba Election Act, 1904, provides for such revision of the lists as follows:—

"A line in black or red shall be drawn by the revising judge or barrister in the middle or through the name of any person struck off the list of electors or from the list of applications appearing in the registration register, but in such a manner that the name can be readily read and distinguished."

The only practical difference is that the Liberals used a red line, and the Conservatives selected a black one, for the lists were revised and changed by the Conservatives previously in the same manner as that adopted by the Liberals with the exception of the black line being used instead of the red one.

In the provincial elections in Manitoba the returning officer divided the registration districts, changed the polling divisions and adjusted the lists to suit the changed polling divisions and did it by drawing a black line through the names.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as well as to nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nerve. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeons' knife, would it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite "naturally averse," because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended. voters. For instance, the large number of Galicians were prevented from participation in the provincial elections of 1903, because the law provided that they must reside seven years in the province and they could only register if able to read a portion of the Manitoba act in one of the following languages: English, French, German, Icelandic or any Scandinavian language. This is not only barred out a number of Germans and Scandinavians but it kept all other foreign born citizens off the lists, unless they had resided in Manitoba for seven years. These same lists are in force to-day, with slight revision, and they contain the names of thousands who have no right to vote, while thousands of bona fide electors are not on the lists at all.

Partizans Appointed.

The Conservatives claim that they do not profit through their power to appoint registration clerks.

Why then did the Conservative Government of Manitoba take the appointment of these registration clerks out of the hands of the judges?

Why do they invariably appoint active party workers to these positions?

These registration clerks have wide discretionary powers in deciding whether a case is made out in favor of registering an absent voter, and in practice it is not uncommon to have the registration clerk refuse to register absentees. Again under clause 18 of the Manitoba Elections Act, the clerk can at his discretion demand that a foreign born citizen shall produce his naturalization papers before register-

POLITICAL NEWS!

The subject of the amendments to the Election Act has been the occasion of a great difference of opinion in the House during the past week. It must be remembered that what the Conservatives describe as the thin red line outrage in Manitoba will be corrected after this bill becomes law.

No Person Disfranchised.

In this connection it should not be forgotten that Conservatives have charged that owing to the crossing off names in the Manitoba lists by using a red line, thousands of voters have been disfranchised. With this in mind, the statement made by Mr. Borden, when replying to Mr. Aylesworth, is a most curious one. Mr. Borden said—Hansard, May 5, '08, page 8121—

"Of the 50,000 or 75,000 electors in Manitoba not one has come to this House by way of petition asking for any redress at the hands of this Parliament, and not one name has been given by my hon. friend the Minister of Justice this afternoon of any man in the Province of Manitoba who has been unjustly deprived of his vote. I would like my hon. friends opposite to registration districts, changed the polling divisions and adjusted the lists to suit the changed polling divisions and did it by drawing a black line through the names.

Examples of Faulty Lists.

What would happen if the lists as sent out by the Clerk of the Court in Chancery were not changed? It would be chaotic. As an example, the lists supplied by this officer for the Dominion Constituency of Lisgar contain 7,344 names, of which 3,097 do not belong in the constituency, but in the local constituencies which overlap. These 3,097 names had to be struck out to make a correct list, and a red line was drawn through them, following the indication given in section 65 of the Manitoba Election act.

Take as another example the Dominion constituency of Selkirk. The list supplied by the Clerk of the Court in Chancery contains 8,388 names, of which 3,165 do not belong in the constituencies which overlap.

Another example is that of Portage La Prairie. In this case the Clerk of the Court in Chancery supplied a list containing 13,000 names, of which 5,000 odd were in local constituencies which overlap.

The instances given here are only fair samples of what is the case with each one of the ten Dominion constituencies, and the bill introduced by Mr. Aylesworth is designed to correct this evil, and there cannot be the slightest objection to it in this regard. Of course, should the bill become law there would no longer be any necessity for a thin red line, or any line, and the opposition would be deprived of a scandal which they have exploited throughout the country.

No Legal Lists Exist.

Hon. Thomas Greenway of Manitoba made the statement that there was not a legal voters' list in Manitoba, and no provision in the law by which a legal voters' list can be had. This is a disability under which the elections of Manitoba exist today, and the fault is with the provincial Conservative government, who have been very derelict in their duty in this regard.

Borden Opposed Provincial Lists.

Having to accept the provincial lists in a Dominion election, sets up an intolerable condition of affairs. When the subject of accepting the provincial lists was under discussion in 1896 Mr. R. L. Borden said;

"Even if we do adopt the provincial law, I would suggest that we should ments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended. A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

not go beyond saying that the provincial enactments as they exist at present, and the basis on which the voters' lists are now made up in the different provinces, shall be the basis on which we shall proceed in the future. I do not see why we should pledge ourselves now to the wisdom of what any provincial legislation may pass in the future.

The whole discussion on this occasion shows the determined hostility of the Conservatives to the principle of accepting the provincial lists. The discussion shows clearly that the Government were dealing with the provincial lists as they then existed, that they expressly disclaimed any intention of necessarily accepting future provincial legislation; and that in any case they reserved the full power of protecting the Dominion from provincial legislation designed to give an advantage to one of the political parties.

Dominion Rights Preserved.

Both Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fitzpatrick declared specifically that they did not propose that the Parliament should renounce its right to prepare and control its own lists if the necessity for doing so should arise. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the Dominion accepted the provincial lists as a matter of convenience, without conceding that the Dominion were obliged to accept any lists which provincial legislature might care to prepare. Speaking on this point Sir Wilfrid Laurier said in 1898:

"I am quite disposed for my part to accept the franchise prepared by the legislature, whether Liberal or Conservative. But, if the day comes when a fraud is committed against this Parliament when legislation of a hostile character is brought forward in the legislature, then it will be always open for the Parliament to resume its own powers, and to enact a franchise law of its own."

Throughout the whole discussion in 1898 there was not a single expression by any member indicating that the House had any conception of a provincial permanent voters' list complied by agents of a Government, which list was to be kept alive year after year by a revision, the extent and character of which would be determined each year by the Government of the province. The members of the Opposition were even more forcible than the Government in warning Parliament against the unwisdom of declaring that under all and any circumstances the provincial lists should be regarded as suitable for Dominion purposes.

The abuses made possible by the Manitoba Conservative Government have made it imperative that a voters' list for Dominion purposes shall be prepared at the instance of the Dominion Government.

Cannot Hold Proper Election.

To hold a Dominion election to-day on provincial lists made in 1903 and only partially revised since, would be a farce, and could but cause the disfranchisement of a large number of absentees. Again under clause 18 of the Manitoba Elections Act, the clerk can at his discretion demand that a foreign born citizen shall produce his naturalization papers before registering his name. As in a large proportion of cases, these naturalization papers are on file in the Department of the Interior in connection with applications for titles, this clause gives the registration clerk the choice of registering or not registering a large proportion of foreign born electors who apply.

The registration clerk thus had considerable powers under the act which he can use in the interests of the Conservative party.

Time for Change Has Come.

The time to pass an act in which provision shall be made for Dominion voters' lists for Dominion elections has arrived. It is nothing less than a scandal to conduct Dominion elections upon lists made for provincial constituencies which do not coincide with Dominion boundaries. Lists which contain the names of thousands of men either dead or absent. The time has arrived to purge the list of such names.

The bill presented by Mr. Aylesworth provides that the lists as established in the provinces shall be taken in the preparation of the lists for Dominion purposes, and to them shall be added the names of any persons qualified to vote which are not on them, and from them shall be struck the names of all those who are not qualified. The lists so prepared, subject to the revision of a county court judge, shall be allotted and distributed to the polling divisions, to be used in the Dominion elections.

It is intended that this provision shall apply to those parts of the Dominion not already provided for by Dominion legislation, in which municipal organizations and assessment rolls as the basis for the voters' lists are not to be found, and with the provision the system is consistent with the intention of parliament, as expressed in 1898.

To show the fairness of this provision, not only are the provincial lists adopted in their entirety as the basis upon which revision and appeal takes place, but in addition the provincial method of preparing and revising the lists is followed, and the lists are made in accordance with whatever laws the provinces choose to enact for their own purposes.

Bill Appeals to Reason.

No reasonable man can urge any objection to the bill now before the House. It has for its main object the creation of a fair voters' list for Dominion purposes, one upon which will be found the names of all persons entitled to vote, but from which will be stricken the names of all persons improperly found there. No voter will be disfranchised, there will be no occasion in the future to use either a red or black line. The list will coincide with the constituency to which it is applicable, and there will be a square deal to all, and favor to none.

The Opposition cannot urge any objection to this bill based upon logic or reason, although for political purposes they seek to make it appear that the lists are to be manipulated in the Liberal interest, something practically impossible under the terms of the bill, and foreign altogether to the intentions of the Minister of Justice.

SUNSET AT GUAYAQUIL.

There is No Twilight, No Interval Between Daylight and Dark.

The days and nights at Guayaquil are of equal length. The sun knocks off promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening and gets up at 6 in the morning with equal regularity the whole year around. There is no twilight, no gloaming, no interval whatever between daylight and dark—only a brilliant illumination, the sudden disappearance of a red ball into a blue ocean, a spread of flame color over all the western sky for a few minutes and a purple haze in the east.

Then the surface of the ocean, like the heavens, is lighted with millions of strange and shifting stars, for the water is so impregnated with phosphorus that each tiny wave is tipped with light, and the foam that follows in the wake of the vessel is often like a stream of fire. Sometimes you can see porpoises swimming along the bow of the vessel livid with phosphorescent light and followed by a streak of sparks like a comet's tail.

The Southern Cross, with the right arm tipped out at proper angle, lies straight ahead in the midst of myriads of unknown worlds that look strange to those accustomed to the northern constellations. Under the left arm is a large black spot in the heavens, brightened by only a single modest star, which the sailors call "the devil's dinner bag." Over the stern of the vessel in the early evening you can plainly distinguish the familiar constellation of the Great Bear, but it goes to bed with the children.

That it is much more injurious to smoke quickly than slowly is the conclusion arrived at by two Austrian scientists after careful study and experiment.

The two professors—Dr. Liebermann and Dr. Davidovics—tested pieces of cotton which had been placed in the mouthpieces of pipes and cigar holders and found them covered with yellowish brown flecks. These were found to be of a fatty nature, produced during the process of combustion, and highly poisonous.

It was found also that two cigars of the same brand and strength often produced differing degrees of discoloration of the cotton. Further investigation showed that these differences were due to the length of time occupied in

THE BLACK TRACKERS

Wonderful Keeness of These Natives of Australia.

USED TO TRACK CRIMINALS.

These Men Are Veritable Bloodhounds and Have a Natural Instinct For Running Down Desperadoes Who Are Fleeing From Justice.

A criminal in Australia knows that his chances for escape are nearly hopeless if a "tracker" is put upon his trail within a day after the crime is discovered. A "tracker" is a native black man having a natural instinct for running down criminals fleeing from justice. These men are veritable bloodhounds, and their strange power is possessed by no other race in the world.

So implicit is the confidence felt in them by the police that when a black starts out upon a man hunt the officer who goes with him merely follows in his wake. He does not question him or in any way interfere with him, but, leading his own horse, allows the guide to go in whatever direction he pleases, no matter how apparently reasonless his course may seem.

The most successful trackers are in Queensland, near the edge of New South Wales. They will travel any distance, animated by no feeling of hatred for their quarry, but only desirous of proving their expertness. The reward they ask is absurdly small for the long and difficult trails. A few shillings or some cheap bracelets, rings, and so on, quite satisfy them. They have no idea of the value of money. Rum is their great weakness.

Once a tracker was employed to locate some valuable trees for a timber man. He had to travel some forty miles through a forest so dense that it was necessary to cut his way through with his tomahawk. All he asked for was a bottle of rum, while the timber merchant derived over £2,000 from the sale of the trees.

The following description of a man hunt will convey a clear idea of the dangers and hardships to be endured:

In this particular case the tracker was a splendid specimen of manhood. The usual loin garments of kangaroo skin he had exchanged for a light covering of cotton cloth provided by the police. He led a horse, so as to make time in the open country districts

It was found also that two cigars of the same brand and strength often produced differing degrees of discoloration of the cotton. Further investigation showed that these differences were due to the length of time occupied in smoking. The same weight of tobacco smoked in five minutes produced nearly three times as many yellowish brown spots as if it were smoked in fifteen minutes. The professors therefore concluded that a rapid smoker inhales a much larger quantity of poisonous substance, to the consequent injury of his health, than does his more phlegmatic colleague.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Horses and Music.

Horses are particularly sensitive to music. Gueneo, who carefully studied the matter, quotes the following curious fact: "In 1892 the Fifty-eighth regiment of Infantry was making a military test march when the music struck up. The young horse of Captain De R. hastened forward and placed itself, in spite of its rider, behind the last rank of the musicians. Then it followed peacefully, giving obvious signs of pleasure."

"When the music ceased the captain was able to resume his place at the head of his company, but the band struck up again, and the horse, notwithstanding the efforts of Captain De R., galloped ahead and, once more placed itself behind the musicians. This happened every time the band played."

Lions have been found to listen with marked joy to the piano. They appreciate the top notes and the medium, but roar terribly when the bass keys are struck loudly.

Her Sweet Revenge.

Difficult subjects require careful handling, and for this reason a room clerk at a woman's hotel must have special qualifications. One of the many applicants to approach a clerk of this class was a young, prepossessing woman, who, a few days ago, walked to the desk and hesitatingly asked if a room could be had at a moderate price. "Would you like a room at a dollar and a half a day?" With a startled look she replied, "I want one at $3 a week." "We have rooms at that price, but none vacant. You can see that the office is full of guests, and it is not probable that we shall have such a room as you desire until one of our guests dies—or gets married." Sweeping the office with her eyes, the young woman replied sweetly, "Oh, then, it is hopeless!"

"You Americans don't appreciate art," said the man from abroad.

"We don't, eh?" rejoined the earnest patriot. "Why, we pay more opera singers more than we do baseball players!"—Exchange.

ous offense.

The offender was a well seasoned bushman, cunning and acquainted with the tactics of the trackers. Furthermore, he had two days' start of his pursuers.

To accompany a chase like this is awesome, the utter silence and desolation of the woods is so depressing. Then, too, the trails are deceptive, often leading to a deserted wood camp beneath a foliage so dense that it is impossible even to catch a glimpse of the sky. Darkness closes in very quickly in the mountain regions, and by nightfall the tracker and his employer were glad to reach an "accommodation house," or rancher's home, where such as these were usually welcomed and allowed to put up for the night. At this house the officer tried to hear tidings of his man, but no one had seen him.

All the next day the black fellow led along as swiftly as possible. The way was extremely rough, and mile after mile was covered through wild silences until a stranger would surely think the guide was playing a losing game. At no time could they ride, and it was with great difficulty that they reached a sort of clearing, where the horses were tied and camp struck for the night. Tearing huge strips of bark from the trees and wrapping blankets around them, each lay on the concave surface of one for a bed and rested.

At noon the next day a bushman's cabin was reached, and there the tired horses were tethered. The hunters then proceeded on foot. Another night in the forest, and the fourth day found these intrepid hunters making their way through underbrush peculiar to Australia, called "lawyers and barristers," because its thorns and brambles catch one at every turn. Once the guide hesitated, turned back and struck off in another direction down an embankment, the rest tumbling after him.

A wild chase that must have been! Two white men following the apparently mad actions of a black fellow into places so remote that it would have been impossible to find the way out of them alone, but such is the confidence in that country in the faithfulness and ability of a tracker. He now crawled for the greater part on his hands and knees, minutely examining twigs and branches for signs of a freshly broken passageway for the fugitive. He was about ten feet ahead of the others when he gave a subdued exclamation of delight.

"I catch white feller quick!" he said and pointed to a scrap of cloth clinging to a broken twig. Four hours more and a river was reached. There in the damp earth of the bank two footprints were plainly seen.

The tracker leaped into the river and struck out for the opposite side. Emerging upon the other bank, he ran, dripping, for twenty feet or so, following footprints that had again stopped at the water's edge.

Then the trailer paused. He was plainly puzzled. What had become of the cattle thief? Had he recrossed the river or swam down as far as he could and landed on either bank, then struck into the woods again? After sharply examining the ground the troubled guide swam back and landed a few yards below his party. By his actions they saw that he had found the tracks again. The criminal had indeed crossed the river, but where had he gone after that?

Trust a tracker to solve riddles of that sort! Suddenly he began uncovering the leaves and twigs between him and the other two men until he reached them. They were sitting beneath a huge eucalyptus tree.

"White feller no fool black feller!" he said, smiling, wet and breathless. Then it was seen that the fugitive had carefully covered up his tracks by the eldest, but the youngest son, who inherits. It is rare that a bur (peasant) dies as reigning head. When he gets on in years he abdicates in order to end his days in the leibgedinghaus (dower house), which stands beside eachhof (steadings).

That he does so in favor of his youngest son is very sensible. Were it the elder he would have no peace, for as soon as he married he would try to induce his parents to retire just at an age when power is sweetest and best exercised. For this reason the practical farmers of bygone generations decided to hand over the succession to the youngest, since when Benjamin is a full grown man father Jacob is old and glad to rest.

This law of inheritance goes by the name of vortel. Should the heir of his own free will desire to resign in favor of his elder brother the latter must buy the property from him. In such a case the younger may be termed a kind of Esau.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foula, one of the Shetland islands, the natives make a business of rearing skau gulls in order to rid the island of the eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became a favorite haunt of the eagles, and in this inaccessible spot they increased so rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwell on this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the inveterate foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious, and so the inhabitants of Foula hit upon the novel plan of feeding and caring for the skau gulls, which, though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man.

THE PRISON BIRD.

This African Beauty Seals His Mate Up In the Nest.

The peculiarity of the prison bird, a feathered beauty of Africa, is that he is the most tyrannical and jealous of husbands, imprisoning his mate throughout her nesting time. Living stone watched the bird's habits while in Monpour and in his subsequent observations referred to the nest as a prison and the female bird as a slave.

The nest is built in the hollow of a tree through an opening in the bark. As soon as it is completed the mother bird enters carefully and fearfully and settles down in it. Then papa wall up the opening, leaving only just space enough for air and food to pass through. He keeps faithful guard and brings food at regular intervals without fail. The female thrives under her enforced retirement. But if the prison bird is killed or in any other way prevented from fulfilling his duties the mother and her little ones must die of starvation, for she cannot free herself from bondage.

Normally the imprisonment lasts until the chicks are old enough to fly. Then the male bird destroys the barrier with his beak and liberates his family. "It is charming," writes Livingstone, "to see the joy with which the little prisoners greet the light and the unknown world."

THROW AWAY LINIMENTS

Here's the Prescription to Cure Rheumatism.

Liniments only reach the skin and the muscles directly under the skin. Now, liniments can't cure Rheumatism. They simply deaden the nerves for a time. When the effect wears away, the pain returns worse than ever.

If the bowels do not move regularly—if the kidneys are strained or weak—if the skin is dry or harsh—the blood is sure to be filled with impurities or urea. This urea is changed into uric acid which is the poison that causes rheumatism.

Now, the only possible way to cure Rheumatism is to prevent uric acid from being formed. Logically, the only way to do this is to keep kidneys, bowels and skin in good working order, and prevent the stomach from being too acid. And the only way to do this is to take "Fruit-a-tives."

These marvelous tablets of fruit juices and tonics act directly on the three great eliminating organs—bowels, kidneys and skin—and put them in perfect condition. That is the only secret of their great success in curing rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago. 50c a box—6 for $2.50. "Fruit-a-tives," Limited, Ottawa.

Landseer and the Dog Tax.

On one of Landseer's early visits to Scotland, the great painter stopped at a village and took a great deal of notice of the dogs, jotting down rapidly sketches of them on a piece of paper. Next day on resuming his journey he was horrified to find dogs suspended from trees in all directions or drowning in the rivers, with stones around their necks. He stopped a weeping urchin, who was hurrying off with a pet pup in his arms, and learned to his dismay that he was supposed to be an excise officer who was taking notes of all the dogs he saw in order to prosecute the owners for unpaid taxes.

Why Negroes Like Watermelons.

The humorists always associate the African with the watermelon, assuming that the taste of the colored man for his favorite dainty arises from his life in the southern states, where the melon vine grows like a weed. As a fact, however, the African taste for the watermelon is hereditary. The vine is a native of Africa, where it is found wild in the great central plains of the continent, and has also been cultivated for many ages. In Egypt the melons grown along the Nile rival those of southeastern Missouri. The melons mentioned by the Israelites as being among the good things they had in Egypt were undoubtedly watermelons, for in the wall paintings about the time of the exodus the melon vine is represented, and in one case a long procession of slaves is depicted, each bearing on his shoulder a huge, dark green watermelon.

Pulling the Eagle's Tail.

I knew an Indian, Yellow Eagle, who in order to get his coup feather dug a hole in the ground on the open prairie far from camp or habitation. Over it he fixed a covering of brush, upon which was laid the carcass of a freshly slain antelope. In this trap he lay for three days awaiting the eagle's coming. When at last, lured by the bait, one did alight he seized it from below, and despite its flapping and clawing and pecking he plucked the precious feathers before freeing the astonished and terrified bird. I recall none but the American aboriginal who has been able successfully to pull the American eagle's tail.—Army and Navy Life.

"I don't know, my son. Nobody ever stepped on my tongue the way they have on my corns."

"If any one has reason to praise Peruna, it is surely myself.

"Last spring I became run down from the serious effects of lingering cold and several complications united in pulling me down.

Aids Digestion, Promotes Sleep.

Mr. E. Arnold, Westerly, R.I., writes: "I wish to say a good word for your valuable remedy, Peruna. I have taken many kinds of medicine during my life, but find that Peruna stands ahead of all. It aids digestion, promotes sleep, quiets the nervous system, strengthens the throat and vocal organs. I have used it for catarrh and to break up sudden colds which is the best of all.

"I contracted a severe cold once which ended in pleurisy and left me weak, and every change of weather would bring a return of old pains. Peruna now vanishes all pain. I cannot praise it enough. I tell all my friends that it is the best medicine used for the ills of life. If any word of mine will lead others to try it, you are at liberty to use my testimonial in any form."

BROKE UP THE ARMY.

A Mean Trick That Demoralized the Haitian Troops.

When not fighting or drinking the Haitian negro spends his time lying in the sun smoking innumerable cigarettes. All over the island the roads made originally by the Spanish and French have fallen into ruin, and the thick forests in the interior are peopled by depraved savages.

A story told by Mr. Sandham, the well known American artist, illustrates the then state of discipline which prevailed among the 8,000 ruffians who bore the courtesy title of "the army."

Hang Up Your Watch.

The question whether it is better to wind a watch at night or in the morning was discussed at a meeting of the British Watch and Clock Makers' guild. The London Express took up the subject and obtained the views of George Russell, an expert on timepieces. "Given a good watch, it does not matter in the least whether you wind it at night or in the morning," he told the reporter. "But a watch never keeps the same time when the position is constantly altered. Watches which are sent to Kew and which are tested in several positions rarely keep the same time. The moral to be drawn, therefore, is

REMARKABLE INVENTION FOR THE CULTURE OF HAIR

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

The Company's Guarantee.

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. L. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia, a loss of hair, stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles, their power, without resorting to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

thick forests in the interior are peopled by depraved savages.

A story told by Mr. Sandham, the well known American artist, illustrates the then state of discipline which prevailed among the 8,000 ruffians who bore the courtesy title of "the army."

Mr. Sandham and an Irish friend who resided in the island were one day watching the commandants of the Haitian army reviewing his troops.

"Would you like to see me break up the whole lot?" asked the Irishman.

"Of course," replied the artist.

The Irishman then took five silver coins from his pocket and, with a loud shout, threw them up in the air. Instantly the whole army leaped forward and scrambled for the money, the commandant himself securing the first three pieces. After pocketing them with dignity and restoring order among his men he ordered the Irishman to be arrested for bringing discredit on the army. The Irishman was sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment, but five pieces of silver and a bottle of rum secured his instant release.

SKYSCRAPERS OF ROME.

Ancient Regulations Regarding the Height of Buildings.

"The skyscraper is no modern invention," says a St. Louis architect well read in the history of his profession. "In all the ancient cities where brick or stone was available high houses within the walls of the city were very numerous because of the lack of ground space for building.

"In the days of Augustus the tenement houses of Rome became so high as to be dangerous, and laws were passed condemning a number of tenement rows and ordering them to be taken down, while at the same time a law was enacted limiting the height of all future tenements to a hundred feet. For palaces and public buildings there was no limit.

"After the burning of the city in Nero's time the streets, which before were no wider than our alleys, were made broader. Some of them through the business part of the city were forty feet wide, and some of the great thoroughfares were sixty.

"The tenement height was lowered to eighty feet, and as a consequence the city spread far beyond its walls. The average height of a ceiling in a Roman tenement was a little over five feet. The windows were open holes in the wall, stopped in cold weather with board shutters. So the worst modern tenement is a palace compared with the skyscraper home of the poor when the empire was at its best."

Spent Eighteen Dollars

"Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that I have used $18.00 worth of Psychine, and as a result was cured of very serious throat and lung trouble.

My case was a most difficult one, and the doctors had practically said that I could not get well. I tried Psychine, and it did me so much good that I continued its use until I had taken $18.00 worth, with the result that I am now a new man physically. I have gained thirty-five pounds.

"It is with the greatest confidence that I recommend Psychine to all who are afflicted with throat or lung trouble.

Yours truly, C. A. PINKHAM.

Watches which are sent to Kew and which are tested in several positions rarely keep the same time. The moral to be drawn, therefore, is keep your watch as much as possible in the position in which you wear it during the day. In other words, hang your watch up at night."

Where Were the Gordons?

An old woman of the name of Gordon in the north of Scotland was listening to the account given in Scripture of Solomon's glory, which was read to her by a little grandchild. When the little girl came to tell of the thousand camels which formed part of the Jewish sovereign's live stock, "Eh, lassie," cried the old woman, "a thousand Camppells, say ye? The Camppells are an auld clan, sure eneuch, but diana ye see the Gordons too?"

THE COME AND SEE SIGN

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and above-board."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs — without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told? Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write? Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted by women only, and are the letters kept strictly confidential? Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents? Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands of these women? Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

Many People Need a Good Tonic.

Peruna, a Standard Tonic the World Over.

Mr. C. A. Landgrave, Box 25, Coalburg, Ohio, Gives His Experience With Peruna. Read His Letter Below:

In the bracing rigors of winter to the balmy warmth of spring-time is a climatic change which affects every one more or less. A great multitude of people, however, are so affected by the change as to require medical assistance.

Many people neglect to take a good tonic that will safely tide them over the trying weather of spring, the system is weakened, the blood over loaded with effete materials of the winter season and the victim is rendered an easy prey to acute ailments.

It has been the universal experience of mankind that a spring tonic of some sort is necessary. All remedies, herbal and mineral, have been used. There is usually great uncertainty as to the value of the average spring tonic.

Peruna, on the other hand, has been in use for so many years and in such a variety of climates and a multitude of people that its beneficial operation for spring ailments has become a practical fact. Peruna can be relied upon as a spring tonic. It cleanses the blood by correcting the digestion which is the source of good blood.

MR. C. A. LANDGRAVE

"I had been a slight sufferer for a number of years, but paid little attention to it until the spring of this year when my suffering became very severe.

"I had pain in the head, back, liver, chest and other parts of my body, besides indigestion which caused me much trouble.

"I tried medical aid, but to no purpose. I wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice, telling him of my various ailments and he informed me that I had systemic catarrh.

"After using the first bottle of Peruna, I felt relief. I continued to use it until I had taken four bottles, when I felt entirely cured. I recommend Peruna to others."

MR. L. D. TOWNSEND

MRS. E. MALMGREN

Century Bk, St. Joseph, Mich., writes: "Peruna has done for my family. My wife, with was very much run down, lacking energy in head and back. Peruna, which she did with most satisfactory results, completely restored to her usual vigor, and she thanks to Peruna. She is not tired and overworked and in every way as good as new."

Headache and Backache.
Mrs. Nannie Hall, 12 Herbert street, Atlanta, Ga., writes:
"I write to tell you how much good your Peruna has done for me. I was so sick and nervous that I was almost dead. I could not eat nor sleep nor work any at all, but was in bed nearly all the time, and was almost a skeleton I was so poor. Now I can eat anything I want and it doesn't hurt me, and I can sleep all night long and get up and work all day. I don't have any nervous-

Mrs. Elin Malmgren, 77 Cleveland street, West Manchester, N. H., writes:
"Every spring and fall, for eleven years, I have been troubled with catarrh in my throat and nose and hoarseness.
"I am pleased to state that at last I found a medicine, Peruna, from which I received great benefit, and I will hereafter use and recommend it.
"I always keep it in my house in case of sickness.

ness now, but am happy all the day long. I sing the praises of Peruna wherever I go, and I believe it saved my life. I could not have lived through the summer in the condition I was in.
"I had tried many doctors, but they did me no good. Peruna certainly cured me. I had headache and backache and was very nervous. I could not eat nor sleep, and was almost in my grave. I tried your Peruna, and I felt better from the start. I took about five bottles of Peruna and the awful headache and nervousness was gone. I could eat anything, and my nerves are all right, and I have no more backache. I am well, and Peruna cured me."

Doctors Called It Consumption.
Miss Ella L. Matthews, Box 111, Hill City, Tenn., writes:
"I find much pleasure in writing you to tell you know that I have been taking your wonderful tonic, Peruna. From experience I have decided that there could be no greater medicine in the world than Peruna.
"Several physicians had pronounced my disease as consumption. I had been a sufferer for several years, and was growing weaker all the while, until I could hardly walk across my room.
"I was so fortunate as to get a Peruna book, and after reading it carefully I decided Peruna was the remedy for me, so I began taking it. To-day my health is better than it has been since I had the measles ten years ago. I cannot express half the praise which is due to Dr. Hartman for his great and wonderful remedy and his advice regarding health. I do not think I would be living this day had it not been for Peruna."

Catarrh of the Head.
Mr. C. Hallock, Antwerp, O., writes:
"My daughter Allie, after taking three bottles of your Peruna is entirely cured of catarrh of the head of two years' standing. We have used Peruna as a general tonic, as well as for catarrh, and are well pleased with it and recommend it to anybody who has catarrh. Anybody wishing any information can write to me."

WORSE THAN HISSING.
Stone Throwing Was a Habit in Theaters of Ancient Greece.
Getting the bird, writes a correspondent, need not always prove a source of woe to the unfortunate actor, for there are still some nations that express their applause by hissing. The Basutos, for instance, and the natives of the New Hebrides employ this method of expressing their admiration. Even among ourselves an interruption of the actor who grips our attention is quelled with the hissing "Hush!" which is intended to silence the inter-

He described the operations of the various emigration societies in this country as "simply abominable." These charitable and religious societies had put up the stiffest fight against the Government's legislation on the subject.
He severely criticised the emigration scheme of General Booth, whose organization he described as the Emigration Army. Salvation, he said, being now a side issue. The Salvation Army were busy seeking emigrants from the mother country, and on the other side of the water the Army's re-

THE KOOKABURRA.
Australia's Laughing Bird and Its Startling Cry.
To the outside world the greatest ornithological oddity in Australia is the kookaburra. Though Australians take little notice of it except occasionally in a hostile way, its cackling appeals irresistibly to the newcomer. Like the shrieks and parrots, the curlew and the mopeke, it is a conspicuous figure in the scenery of a typical bush home and therefore too common to be worthy of notice. In earlier times it was known as the "settler's clock" from a belief that its joyful peacans were vent-

Even among ourselves any interruption of the actor who grips our attention is quelled with the hissing "Hush!" which is intended to silence the interrupter and show our admiration for the interrupted.

On the whole, authors and actors of today have reason to congratulate themselves upon the disuse of many of the ancient Greek methods of showing dissatisfaction in the theater. The worst that a playwright must reckon with now is an ironical cry of "Author!" followed by a booming demonstration. But it is on record that the Athenian audience at least once forcibly ejected an unsuccessful comic poet from the theater. The pelting of bad actors with vegetables and questionable eggs is rare now even in the remotest provinces. But the Athenians did not draw the line at figs and olives as missiles. Aeschines was said nearly to have been stoned to death during his stage career, and there is a story of a second rate musician who borrowed a quantity of stone from a friend to build a house with, promising to repay the loan with the stones collected at his next performance.—London Chronicle.

HUMAN SACRIFICES.

The Brutality That Went With War In Former Times.

Before a battle in former times the priests solemnly devoted to the gods the whole of the hostile army then in sight, and, if possible, no man of it was left alive. When Hermann decimated the great host of Varus into the forest depths all the Romans that escaped death in the battle were captured and led into the dark recesses, where every man of them was sacrificed upon hastily erected altars.

Latham, in his edition of Tacitus, quotes six contemporary authorities to show that this practice of concluding a victory with human sacrifices was customary among our Teutonic ancestors. Some crucified their prisoners, others hung them up to trees for archery practice, but in general a captive was either slain on the spot or else reserved to be sacrificed to the gods. Even when the progress of agriculture induced them to keep a majority of the prisoners alive to be slaves they appeased the gods for this indignity by increasing the tortures inflicted on the small remainder.

Gibbon describes how, before the blazing altar, every hundredth man's arms were hacked off him and, before his eyes, thrown into the flames. All that a red Indian would have done in the eighteenth century was freely practiced by our ancestors of twelve centuries ago. And the highest ideal of a man then included, as a duty, dark cruelty and gruesome revenge against all his enemies.

Marriage by Halter.

Among ignorant people of English birth it was once the belief that a wife bought with money or goods was legally married if the purchaser led her all the way home by a halter.

Mr. Baring Gould, the English antiquarian, told of a village poet known to him who bought a wife for a half crown and led her twelve miles to his cottage. The squire and the rector protested to the village poet that he was not legally wedded.

"Why, yes, I be," he replied. "I'll take my Bible oath I never once took the halter off till she'd crossed the doersill and the door was shut."

The latest instances of such wife sales occurred in 1858 and 1859, when women were sold in Little Horton and in Dudley. In these cases a blue ribbon took the place of the straw halter.

An address on immigration to Canada from the Canadian trade unionist's point of view was delivered to members of Edinburgh and District Trades Council last night in the Canonagat Institute by Mr. W. R. Trotter, to whom the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada has delegated the task of showing to the people in the Motherland the view taken by organized labor in Canada of wholesale emigration to the Dominion. Mr. Walter Bell presided.

Mr. Trotter assured his audience at the outset that the trades unionists were fairly well organized in Canada, and mentioned that the Union to which he belonged operated over an area reaching from Edmonton in Canada down to the Gulf of Mexico, and it had branches in the Philippines. They did not have half a dozen unions of the same craft bickering with each other as there were in this country.

The Canadian Government he said, had a big territory to fill up, and in seeking for population they asked for three classes of people—farmers and farm workers, railway navvies, and domestic servants. These classes had been asked for right along the line. The Government had never asked for anything else; but certain people were interested in having other classes brought into the country. They would like to have four men for each job in the mechanical crafts; and they had produced such a state of affairs that every municipality in Canada had a large unemployment problem on its hands, and the associated charities were doling out relief week by week.

So far as the mechanical trades were concerned, Canada was no better off than this country.

He declared emphatically that the Canadian Government stated that it had not authorized skilled mechanics to go to Canada, and he quoted a Government pamphlet on the subject in support of his assertion.

GOVERNMENT NOT TO BLAME.

The Government of Canada was not to blame, he said. An artisan going to Canada just now had a very bad chance of getting a footing. The Canadian Government agents would declare, if asked, that the skilled artisan's chances of employment in Canada were small indeed. He laid much of the responsibility for the position in Canada as he described it upon the charitable and semi-religious bodies engaged in emigration work.

Pointing out that Canada was yet a young country, he said industrial centres there were few and far between. Consequently, it was ridiculous to suggest that there was work for all artisans. Proceeding, he reviewed the work of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the members of which, he said, were business men who believed that there ought to be at least four men for every job in the country. He asserted that the man who would ship people from one side of the earth to the other "and leave them sliding" were criminals. (Applause.)

The Board of Trade in Canada corresponded to our Chambers of Commerce. He had seen more of the pamphlets issued by these Boards in this country than he had ever seen in Canada. The Boards would not dare to have published these pamphlets in their own districts. Pamphlets recently issued by Canadian Government Departments might be regarded as generally correct, but when reading pamphlets by the Boards of Trade, they ought to be severely criticised as the emigration scheme of General Booth, who organized the Emigration Army. Salvation, he said, being now a side issue. The Salvation Army were busy seeking emigrants from the mother country, and on the other side of the water the Army's representatives were breaking their necks trying to get places for those already sent out by the Army. The methods of the Army, he said, were not always fair and square.

A CURIOUS FARM.

Requires No Fences and Never Had a Wheeled Vehicle.

Within sight of the town of Jasper, Mo., in the Ozarks, a settler has a farm which probably is unlike any other in the world.

This farm occupies the tableland on the summit of a ridge and is inclosed with a fence which no animal has ever broken through. It does not rise above the surface of the farm, but falls sheer from the edge a distance of many feet. The man who homesteaded the tableland had a hard climb up the face of a perpendicular cliff to reach the comparatively level summit.

At one point a ledge extends out a few inches and along the face of the cliff at an upward grade. By following this ledge and making use of occasional points of rocks and of shrubs growing in the fissures the discoverer pulled himself to the summit and found a surface well covered with soil and a luxuriant vegetation.

Gradually he improved the ledge until he could carry up tools and seed. By blasting and drilling he cleared a narrow trail, up which he was able to take first some pigs and then a cow. Later on he took up a horse.

And that today is the condition of this curiously protected farm. No vehicle has turned a wheel within its limits of palisades. The live stock has multiplied and consumes the grain raised. Some stones thrown across the trail completely fence in the hogs and cattle. When the farmer has stock to sell he drives the animals down the private trail and strikes the road to Jasper.

irresistibly to the newcomer. Like the shrieks and parrots, the curlew and the mopeke, it is a conspicuous figure in the scenery of a typical bush home and therefore too common to be worthy of notice. In earlier times it was known as the "settler's clock" from a belief that its joyful peacans were vented regularly at morn, noon and dusk, being quiescent through the heat of the forenoon and the wane of the afternoon. That belief has long been shattered. The kookaburra laughs just when the fit takes it, particularly when excited, and it laughs as readily at the violent death of its mother-in-law as it does at the enraged settler when he falls off his haystack. A wounded bird makes a demoniacal row, which will bring all others within hearing into the neighboring trees, and these at once set up an echoing cackle that is repeated again and again.

The kookaburra is also known as the laughing goburra and the laughing jackass.—Sydney (Australia) Times.

Child's Severe Burns

HEALED BY ZAM-BUK.

The little girl of Mrs. Lewis Best of Carlisle P. O., recently fell against the stove and burned her forehead very badly. Mrs. Best says:—"The burn was about the size of a fifty cent piece and was near the bone. It made my little girl's eye swell till it almost shut, and then she got cold in it. It began to run matter very badly, and I could not stop it, although I bathed it good every night and morning. At last I sent for some Zam-Buk which soon stopped the matter and very quickly healed the wound. I have never seen a burn heal so quickly, and I am sure Zam-Buk has no equal for curing cuts, or burns, and I shall always keep a box on hand in case of emergency."

Every home needs Zam-Buk! All diseases of the skin quickly yields to it. It is also an excellent remedy for piles (blind or bleeding), rheumatism, etc. All druggists and stores 50 cents a box, or post paid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

A JUNE WEDDING BREAKFAST

It Is Good Luck for the Bride to Cut the Cake.

IF I had written, instead of the caption that stands at the top of this page, "Wedding Haste," it would express more fitly the thought that is in my mind as I lay aside a half-finished paper and turn my mind in the direction indicated by a letter received by the morning mail.

It is short and to the point:

Please let us have something at your earliest convenience about a June wedding breakfast—something that will help a bride who has not a superfluity of this world's goods, and who, therefore, cannot afford to employ caterers and decorators, but must plan the festivities herself. I am sorry to seem importunate, but I am in a sore strait and need practical advice.

ANNA L. (South Montrose, Pa.).

The smile and the sigh with which I put by the unfinished article and fit a fresh sheet into the typewriter has "ground pine," works well into garlands and does not droop in artificial heat after the manner of more succulent vines. Clematis will be in leaf—perhaps in bud—the first of June, and will keep fresh for two days if one end of each streamer be set in water. It is easy to conceal small vases for this purpose behind hanging sprays. Even the wreaths about candelabra and chandeliers may be kept fresh by hanging vials of water among the leaves and keeping the cut ends of vines in them. Try, by these and other conceits, to avoid the depressing effect and unpleasing odors of withering herbage. Daisies hold their petals up bravely for hours, but have your bouquets of these set in water or in wet moss.

Let the decorations of the table be low and broad. Shallow bowls, filled with soaked moss, set thickly with marguerites and festooned with clematis—or, if you have no low bowls, large milkpans, covered with green

Mint Punch.

Mix in the bowl, in the proportion of a cupful of granulated sugar to the juice of six squeezed lemons. Stir until the sugar melts. Add then three peeled lemons, sliced as thin as wafers, and set the bowl on ice until you are ready to serve. Have at hand a dozen sprays of green mint, well washed, and a heaping quart of pounded ice. Stir the ice into the contents of the bowl, and pour from a height three bottles of the best ginger ale. Stick the green mint into the beverage and leave it floating there. Add the ginger ale just before the punch is ladled out.

Daisy Salad.

With a sharp knife cut rounds of cream or of Neufchatel cheese about a quarter-inch thick, and lay each upon a crisp lettuce leaf. In the center of each round of cheese dispose a "heart" of finely powdered egg yolk, hard boiled and cold. (Rub it through a fine colander or put it through a vegetable press to get the powder.) Pour a French dressing on the leaf about the "daisy."

Dropping a Gold Ring into the Wedding Cake

Cream a quarter pound of butter by stirring until it is smooth and soft, add the beaten egg and sugar and whip for one minute. Mix two tablespoonfuls of cream with a cup of water, and stir this into the rest of the ingredients. Sift two even teaspoonfuls of baking powder with one and a half cupfuls of flour, and fold into the mixture I have described. Bake in layers. If the batter be too stiff, add a little more cream.

For the white batter, cream a half cupful of butter with one and a half of sugar, add a cupful of warm water (not hot) and two and a half of flour sifted twice with two even teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat for one minute; put in the juice of one lemon and half the grated rind; lastly, fold in the stiffened whites of four eggs. Bake in layers.

LONDON'S FINEST PARK

REFRESHMENT PLACE INVADÉS A RESORT OF FASHION.

Being Built in Hyde Park in the Ring
Where Lords and Ladies Make Merry.

All through the gloom and fog of winter Londoners take small account of their parks and squares and have only a deadened appreciation of their charms. Few persons walk or drive in them except as short cuts to various destinations. But with the first warm hint of spring these once deserted places are crowded with Londoners big and little, who seek there the practical demonstration that springtime has come, writes a London correspondent.

Never has the spring flower show in the parks been better worth seeing than this year. Flowers in England need only small encouragement to grow and the first mild weather brings out myriads of daffodils, primroses, crocuses and tulips.

This year the Green Park abounds in golden daffodils. In St. James's Park and along Constitution Hill the grass is starred with white, purple and gold crocuses. Regents Park has made a specialty of primroses, and Kensington Park has united all these in a multi-colored carpet.

Hyde Park has its usual display of blossoms in which haunting red and yellow tulips predominate, but to the horror of lovers of this largest and most fashionable of London's parks amid the flowers and grassy lawns is rapidly rising a "refreshment retreat," which is being built on one of the most popular and frequented walks. As a matter of fact history is only repeating itself and this new little tea place is to be on the very site of the where for many generations fashionable ladies and gentlemen came to walk, drive and regale themselves on the dainties of their times.

It was Henry VIII., that royal property grabber, who "acquired" the church lands of the Manor of Hyde in 1536 and converted them into a deer park, where he and his successors could hunt to their hearts' content. Charles I. admitted the public to the park in 1636 and then gave it to his people as a place for races and athletic sports.

Stern did Cromwell seems to have loved to walk about the park, and it was he who conceived the idea of enclosing a great stretch of grass with a driveway about it inside iron railings, as a sort of recreation ground. After the Restoration the real popularity of this grassy lawn was established and it became a regular resort for fashionable men and women every afternoon through the spring and summer. Even the King and Queen visited the "Ring," as it was called, and sometimes lingered there to watch the games and sports.

In the very middle of the enclosure were nine pools or springs or sparkling water, where people congregated to drink cooling draughts and where careful mothers dipped their newly weaned babies for luck and health.

A wooden house was erected in the Ring called Prices Lodge, where light refreshments were served and which Pepys and his amiable spouse often frequented. He says "after going to see a fine foot race three times around the Ring we retired to the lodge to partake of cheesecakes and tankards of warm milk."

IN QUEEN ANNE'S TIME

the gayeties in Hyde Park flourished well. May day was high festival for the lords and ladies of the court. May poles were set up and dancers stepped to the rasp and screech of the fiddle strings and bows. Upon the new grown grass collations were served from Price's Lodge. With William and Mary's reign came a diminution of royal prestige for the Bing, but the fun

Or you may simulate the flower by omitting the powdered egg and dropping a little mayonnaise upon the cheese.

Marguerites.

Beat the white of an egg very stiff; stir into it two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the same of finely chopped nut-meats. Heap in the center of round, thin cookies and set in a hot oven until the meringue is formed.

Daisy Cake.

Beat the yolks of four eggs light with a cupful of powdered sugar.

Put sugar, salt and a cupful of water (not hot) and two and a half of flour sifted twice with two even teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat for one minute; put in the juice of one lemon and half the grated rind; lastly, fold in the stiffened whites of four eggs. Bake in layers.

When the cakes are cold, put the layers together, alternating the white and the yellow. Let the filling be a thick white meringue, flavored with vanilla. Use the same for the top, coloring it with finely grated orange peel. When the frosting is hard, make figures of daisies on the top of white meringue with a pastry tube or a paper cylinder. The yellow eyes of the flowers should be dots of orange peel.

travels carefully as to her diet. Even now, the only solid food she gets is an occasional boiled egg or a little bread-and-milk.

With all the care I have given her she has never had a whole night's rest in her life. I am so fortunate as to be able to employ a nurse, yet, like "A Tired Mother," I am all run-down and nervous.

The baby pulls her hair and scratches her head, although she has never had the head-crust so common to babies. I have had her examined by two physicians, who detect nothing wrong. I can't believe it is natural for a baby to want to sit up and play, or for it to cry for an hour or two in the middle of the night. She wakes with a start and scream, and then it is almost impossible to get her to sleep unless she is rocked. Then she whimpers for some time and seems restless.

I wouldn't worry if she slept much during the day, but she does not sleep more than two hours all day long.

One physician says she is "probably nervous." I think that likely, but the remark is too conservative to be comforting or helpful. And would nervousness alone cause her to awake so often during the night?

I shall be most grateful for any advice you or your corps of splendid helpers may offer.

"ANOTHER TIRED MOTHER" (Chicago). You do not overpraise my corps of willing workers. I anticipate practical suggestions and counsel from them that will be of real service to you.

Meanwhile, may I drop a bit of comfort that may stay your weary spirit? Hundreds of babies are born nervous, and incline to weep when they should sleep. I had one of that make in my brood of six healthy, hearty, perfect bairns. And she was, apparently, the healthiest of them all. She slept lightly by day, and hardly one hour at a time during the night. When I set about teaching her that rocking in the arms or cradle was not to be allowed in my nursery, she yelled herself purple in the whole body for two hours at a stretch. Yet she grew and fattened upon what wore nurse and mother to skeletons.

This went on until we took the paradox to the country and kept her out of doors from morning until sundown. Her carriage was set under a tree in the orchard and she had her meals and her siesta there. The change wrought a revolution at once amazing and enchanting. We brought her home in October, the best mannered child we had ever seen. She was happy and active, leaping and laughing in her waking hours, sleeping soundly for one-quarter of the twenty-four, eating like a cormorant and not whimpering even in the bath she used to detest.

Try change of scene if possible, and let her have all the exercise in the outer air you can contrive to give her.

She wakes and cries now from habit. Establish other habits under changed circumstances.

ried him away, and delivered him up to Pilate (Mark 15, 1). John does not record the fact that Pilate before delivering Jesus to be crucified sent him a prisoner to Herod Antipas, whose jurisdiction extended over Galilee and Perea, where Jesus had spent the greater part of his life. Herod was in Jerusalem at this time, and was glad of the opportunity of seeing Jesus, of whom he had heard much. He was disappointed, however, since Jesus absolutely refused to converse with him, with the result that both Herod and his subordinates mocked and ill-treated him before sending him back to Pilate (Luke 23, 5-16). Another incident omitted from John's narrative is the warning of Pilate's wife to her husband to have "nothing to do with that righteous man" (Matt. 27, 19). Both of these events precede Pilate's final presentation to the Jews, and also the cruel mockery and scourging at the hands of the band of Roman soldiers inside the pretorium (John 19, 1-4; Matt. 27, 1-30; Mark 15, 16-19). John, however, adds some valuable details touching the closing scene of our Lord's trial before Pilate (John 19, 7-15), including the mention of the fear that came over Pilate upon his hearing of the claim of Jesus to be the Son of God, and also the threat of the Jews to proclaim Pilate an enemy of Caesar if he should release Jesus.

Verse 17. They took Jesus therefore.—The Roman soldiers delegated to execute the sentence of death, followed, as Luke explains, by a promiscuous multitude (Luke 23, 27).

Himself.—From the synoptic narratives we learn that one Simon of Cyrene was compelled to carry the cross for Jesus part of the way to Golgotha. It is not clear, however, from a comparison of the various narratives whether this was the first or the last part of the way (compare Matt. 27; Mark 15; Luke 23).

The place of a skull.—So called from the oval shape of the hill.

Golgotha—Hebrew, Golgoeth, meaning "a skull"; Latin, Calvaria, whence our name "Calvary." The exact site of Calvary is still a matter of dispute. From the New Testament narrative we know positively only that the place was outside the city gate (Heb. 13, 12), near the city (John 19, 20), and near a public highway (Matt. 27, 39), and near to sepulchers and gardens (John 19, 38).

18. With him two others—Condemned criminals, as the synoptic narratives explain.

19. Wrote a title.—In the sense of "caused to be written."

Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews.—According to Matthew (27, 37): "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews"; according to Mark (15, 26): "The King of the Jews"; according to Luke (23, 38): "This is the King of the Jews." John having been an eyewitness, probably has preserved to us the exact wording of the title, the other evangelists giving only its substance.

20. In Hebrew, and in Latin, and in Greek.—Hebrew was the language of the temple, and the sacred ceremonial of the Jewish religion, Latin was the tongue of the Roman conquerors, at this time in possession of Palestine, while Greek was the language of the classic Gentile literature of the period. Meanwhile the common speech of the street and of commerce was none of these in its purity, but the so-called dialect. This is the mother, and this mother's sister, Mary the wife of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene.—Lit., "his mother and his mother's sister Mary (the wife) of Clopas and Mary the Magdalene." We note, first, that the word "wife," as the italics in the text and the parentheses in our literal rendering of the passage indicate, is in the Greek left to be supplied; and that in the original rendering there are no marks of punctuation. We note also that no conjunction occurs between the phrase, "his mother's sister," and the following noun, "Mary," which would seem to indicate that the two were to be identified, thus making the number of the women mentioned three rather than four, as some commentators think. It is also possible that some other word, as "daughter," or even "sister," may have been intended instead of the word "wife," since any of these three words would have been equally permissible according to linguistic usage. Probably the correct word, however, has been supplied, since it is the same in all of the earliest translations. Clopas, here mentioned, must not be confounded with Cleopas, mentioned in Luke 24, 18. From Matt. 10, 3, and Luke 24, 10, we infer that Clopas is to be identified with Alphaeus, father of James the Less, compare also Mark 3, 18; Luke 3, 16; Acts 1, 13. Alphaeus being the Greek and Clopas the Hebrew or Syriac name for the same person. For reference to other women who were also present at the cross compare Matt. 27, 56; Mark 15, 40, and Luke 23, 49.

26. Woman.—The Greek equivalent is a title of respect.

27. His own home.—It is not necessary to think of a house actually owned by John. The meaning is simply that "from that hour" Mary became a member of the household of the beloved disciple.

29. Vinegar.—A sour wine made from grapes from which the first juice had already been extracted. It was, therefore, a less expensive and inferior beverage used by the common people and furnished to the soldiers.

Upon hyssop.—Either, as some infer, a hollow reed, or, as others suggest, a javelin, the purpose of the hyssop in either case being simply to elevate the sponge sufficiently to administer the alleviating draught. Still other commentators, however, suggest that the hyssop was a kind of spice added to the wine to make it more pungent.

30. Gave up his spirit.—Clearly a voluntary act on the part of Jesus.

31. A high day.—The Sabbath of the Passover, and, therefore, a day of more than ordinary sanctity.

Broken.—In accordance with a common custom by which death was hastened in such cases.

38. Joseph of Arimathea.—Elsewhere referred to as "a rich man" (Matt. 27, 57), "a counsellor," of honorable estate, who also himself was looking for the "kingdom of God" (Mark 15, 43); "a good man and a righteous" (Luke 23, 51). Arimathea is usually identified with a small town near Lydda, southwest of Joppa.

39. Nicodemus.—Like Joseph, a member of the Sanhedrin.

Myrrh and aloes.—Costly spices. A hundred pounds—Twelve hundred ounces.

40. As the custom of the Jews is to bury.—An explanatory clause added for non-Jewish readers who might be more familiar with some other methods of preparing bodies for burial.

42. The Jews' Preparation.—The preparation for the Passover, which was to be eaten on the evening of the same day.

ONLY LONG SLEEVES NOW.

Mistress—Here is a nice dress for you, Martha.

Maid—Thank ye, ma'am; but I can't take it, really.

Mistress—You foolish girl, of course you can take it. I insist.

Maid—No, really, I can't, ma'am. It's got them old-fashioned short sleeves.

Fish-hooks have been made in the same shape for 2,000 years.

ladies and ladies of the court. May poles were set up and dancers stepped to the rasp and screech of the fiddle strings and bows. Upon the new grown grass collations were served from Price's Lodge. With William and Mary's reign came a diminution of royal prestige for the Ring, but the fun and frolic evidently continued, as one chronicler, Tom Browne, describes it thus in 1700:

"Scores of gallant ladies in coaches, some singing, some laughing and others taking one another, toy in the Ring and devour chesscakes, marchepans and China oranges."

Then came a time when the troops were encamped in Hyde Park and the officers were massed within the Ring. This does not seem to have disconcerted in the least the gallant ladies, as they still continue to visit their favorite recreation ground in the afternoons, peep into the tents, joke with their occupants and finish up with "hot dishes of tea and sweet dreams of ratifias."

The first King George thought best to regulate the gaiety of his court, and since some of the staid element were shocked at the revelries of the Ring restrictions were imposed upon those who visited the park daily. Hired coaches could not enter the park gates at all. Only persons of quality were admitted to the ring. Children and servants in livery were relegated to where they had to wait while their august parents and masters took their walks around the Ring. However, the popularity of the recreation ground soon waned and the gallant ladies "turned their attention elsewhere."

Early in the last century Price's Lodge was pulled down and the iron railings enclosing the Ring soon followed. Refreshment and merrymaking were banished and the Ring became like any other stretch of grass in the park with the promenade around it.

In the gloom of the later Georgian period and the early Victorian era, Hyde Park became the solemn resort of fashion and wealth that it is now. Hired cabs are still tabooed and dignity and repose mark the daily progress of smart victorias in Botten Row and the morning church parade which is to be seen on bright Sundays in the season.

That a refreshment place should rise on the old site of Price's Lodge is not fitting, and it is fitting too, perhaps, that tea and thin bread and butter should replace the marchepan, China oranges and syllabubs of bygone days. But it is doubtful if the stately ladies of to-day will regale themselves in the Ring as did the "gallant ladies" of past years, for John Bull and his wife take their pleasures sadly now, and the dignity of a drive in the park is not likely to be marred by taking tea within its precincts.

THOUGHT IT FLIPPANT.

The brave ship was wallowing in the waves that threatened to engulf her at any moment. Hastily the captain ordered a box of rockets and flares to be brought to the rail, and with his own hands ignited a number of them, in the hope that they would be seen and the passengers and crew rescued.

Amid the rockets' red glare a tall, thin, austere individual found his way with difficulty to the rail and spoke to the captain.

"Captain," said he, "I protest against this dare-devilishness. We are now facing death. This is no time for a fireworks display."

ABOUT PAPERHANGERS.

We don't know what it is to have a cyclone visit our home, but we don't believe it could make more muss about the place than the paperhangers do.

ECONOMICAL WEATHER.

Rybolt—"What do you call good weather, anyway?"

Tightweed—"The kind that makes a man's wife prefer her own home to a trip downtown."

Jimmy Plythe, Chorister

"THAT GAME OF FOOTBALL"

JIMMY never ceases to talk of the time when his luck changed.

"Yes, sir," said he, "I had bad luck from the time I could toddle. Always on the losing side, it wasn't until I won my first game of football on Chimney-Pot Common that Fortune faced around and came my way."

"Chimney-Pot Common," you must know, is on the roof of the school for choristers attached to St. Paul's Cathedral, London. This school, which is exclusively for the use of the choristers, is situated in Carter lane, not far from Dean's Court, and separated from the Cathedral by several mercantile warehouses. It was built by Dean Collett in 1874.

When Jimmy said he never had good luck he forgot that it was a bit of fortune to be admitted to the school. He received board and education free of charge in consideration of his service in the choir; and, as his parents were poor, this was a veritable godsend to them. Jimmy forgot he was fortunate to have a good voice.

But it was true that he was always on the losing side. All sorts of games were engaged in by the choristers, but, try as he would, Jimmy never seemed to be able to do anything for his comrades or for himself. It came to be a recognized fact that whichever side possessed Jimmy was sure to lose. You may be sure that always he was the last chosen, and then only when he was needed to make up the required number.

As Jimmy says, that memorable game of Association football marked a turning point in his career. Jimmy at that time was a senior in the school, but hard luck still pursued him. When he was chosen to play his comrades groaned. They knew they would lose; they were sure of it!

But they didn't—and, what is more, it was the skill of Jimmy that won the game! Never was there a greater surprise for the choristers—or, indeed, for Jimmy himself.

And he soon found that his luck had come to stay. For the very next day after the game he was informed that his singing showed such promise that a scholarship to complete his education elsewhere had been granted him.

But Jimmy still insists it was that game of football that "did it."

Parting From Maria

A QUEEN of Italy was visiting one of the children's hospitals. While there she met a little girl who wished very much to have a doll. When the queen mother reached home, she tried to persuade her little girl to send the sick child one of her many dolls. The little princess, at first, could not decide with which one she could part, for each one needed her care so much. One was just learning to walk; one was too sick to be away from home, and another was cutting its teeth. Finally a doll was packed up, with all its pretty dresses, and sent away to the hospital to gladden the heart of the little invalid who wanted it so much. But the little princess, though she had so many other dolls, shed bitter tears, because, as she said, she would never see poor Maria again.

MARTYRS FOR SCIENCE'S SAKE.

Brave Men Who Sacrifice Their Lives for Humanity.

Death has been very busy lately amongst the select band of scientists whose lives have been devoted to original research on behalf of suffering humanity.

Edison has just been operated upon—for the second time—for X-ray dermatitis, the terrible and mysterious malady which killed his principal laboratory assistant, Mr. Clarence Dally, in October, 1905.

Dr. Hall-Edwards, of the Birmingham General Hospital, has lost his left arm from the same cause, and expects very shortly to lose his right. Professor Goetz was killed by the disease in 1903; Dr. Blacker, of St. Thomas's Hospital, fell a victim in the year following; and almost on the very last day of the year 1905, the distinguished Dr. M. Radiguet passed away, after enduring indescribable agony.

Only a few months prior to this latter sad occurrence, there occurred the terrible tragedy at the Government laboratory at Kronstadt, in which a professor and two of his assistants lost their lives through accidentally inoculating themselves with plague bacteria, with which they had been experimenting. After a similar fashion, too, perished in the prime of his life, at Oporto, in 1899, Professor Camara Prestana, of Lisbon, most distinguished among modern bacteriologists.

The eminent Dr. Virchow, Pasteur's friend and colleague, died of hydrophobia, contracted while preparing a "culture" from the spinal cord of a rabid rabbit. Thuillier the French bacteriologist, in order to study the precise action of the cholera germ on the human system, inoculated him-self and died.

And these instances are but typical of hundreds of others. Brave men! Martyrs, all.

CHILDREN WHO RULE EMPIRES.

The New King of Portugal is Just Over Eighteen.

Manuel II., the new King of Portugal, is a young monarch as monarchs go. Indeed, had the murder of his father and his elder brother occurred only a few days before it did, he would have been at one and the same time a king and an "infant" in the eyes of the law. But by Portuguese custom the Crown Prince attains his majority at eighteen, and "Master Manuel," as he was until quite recently, is just over that age.

Even so, however, he is the youngest of living European rulers; although, of course, not the youngest to be proclaimed king. That record, as all the world knows, belongs to King Alfonso of Spain, who was born a king.

Wilhelmina of Holland, too, was a queen de jure when a little girl in short frocks, although she was not formally crowned until her eighteenth birthday.

Kwang Su, the present Emperor of China, was only a few months past three years old when he was proclaimed ruler over more than four million square miles of territory and four hundred millions of human beings. King Chulalongkorn of Siam ascended the throne at fifteen. His powerful neighbor, Mutsu Hito, was acclaimed Emperor of Japan soon after his fourteenth birthday. King Alexander of Servia, whose recent terrible death is still fresh in public memory, was only thirteen, at his accession, and barely seventeen when he brought off, of his own initiative, the coup d'etat that made him absolute monarch in everything but name.

THE 'RIGHTS' OF BRITONS

WHAT YOU CAN DO AND BE WITHIN THE LAW.

Magna Charta States That Right and Justice Must Not be Denied to Anyone.

Britons, of course never have been, and never will be—slaves. They are free men, and as such, possess "rights" and privileges, although exactly what rights they have is not, perhaps, very well known to them, says Pearson's Weekly.

The liberty of the subject is one of the fundamental principles of English law. In fact, one of the clauses of Magna Charta itself states that right and justice must not be delayed or denied to anyone.

It is, naturally, sometimes necessary to keep alleged wrong-doers in safe custody until they can be tried, but to prevent any serious abuses arising out of this state of affairs the "Habeas Corpus Act" was passed in 1679.

Under this act, when a person is detained on a criminal charge, and is not brought to trial, or where he is improperly detained by private individuals, anyone has the right on his behalf to apply to a judge for a Writ of Habeas Corpus, which commands the governor of the gaol or the person who detains him, to bring the individual before the court, so that the judge can investigate the reason why he is kept in custody, and, if no good reason is put forward, he has the right to be set at liberty at once.

In modern criminal practice there is little need of the Habeas Corpus procedure. A man, when arrested, is usually brought before a magistrate very speedily. Frequently on the same day, or the day following his arrest. The magistrate inquires into the case, and if he is unable to conclude his investigation at one sitting, he can order remands for not longer than eight days at a stretch, after which the accused is at once committed to take his trial, or acquitted.

Nevertheless, if occasion arises, either in criminal or civil matters, the "Habeas Corpus" can still be set in motion.

"HANDS UP! OR I FIRE."

Every Briton has the right of defending his property and person, and to use such a degree of force as is necessary and reasonable to attain that object. He must not, however, inflict on his assailant an injury out of all proportion to the harm he himself is suffering.

For instance, if a man of herculean stature strikes a little man, the latter is not entitled to shoot his aggressor. If his life is in imminent danger, he would be entitled to kill his assailant, but if he could protect himself by merely maiming his attacker or by threatening to fire, he must choose the milder course. The right of self-defence should be used sparingly. The proper method for the punishment of the aggressor is, of course, by legal tribunal.

It must not be forgotten, in this connection, that anyone, who, by killing his assailant, takes a course which is considered "unreasonable" or "unnecessary," is liable to be indicted for manslaughter. Cases have arisen where men have been shipwrecked, and in order to save themselves from starvation, they have drawn lots to kill and eat one of their number. Persons who do this are guilty, not of manslaughter, but murder, and it is no defence to show that the victim consented to the course taken.

HOLD ANY OPINIONS YOU CHOOSE.

Another "right" of the Briton is that of holding any opinions he chooses upon any subject or topic on the earth, or off it, and of airing those opinions anywhere and to anyone who cares to listen to him. He can do this to any extent so long as he does not become an actual "nuisance," or cause large

How the Joker Tricked Himself

PERHAPS the lady was easily frightened, but then, said she, when one lives quite a distance from the nearest neighbor it is well to be careful. So she had a great hole dug before the door, and into this she sank a stout cage, open at the top. In daytime the hole and cage were covered by a strong board, but after night-fall a very frail covering was substituted.

One reason for the lady's alarm was the fact that Black Rufus, known far and wide as a terrible criminal, was plundering and burning houses round about.

This fact, too, it was that inspired the Joker to disguise himself as Black Rufus, to attend a masquerade party.

The Joker strode gaily on his way, chuckling at the surprise he would doubtless cause when he presented himself. At a lonely place on the road he stopped to ask a passerby, which direction he should take.

No sooner did the woman see this desperate looking man than she imagined it was Black Rufus. Trembling with fear, she pointed toward a house in the distance.

Laughing to himself at the success of his disguise, the Joker followed the path pointed out to him. He wondered at the absence of lights as he approached the door. All at once the ground appeared to stick from under him.

When the Joker recovered from his fall, it was to find himself in a cage, with around all about him and the air far above. He had come to the 'wrong lous!

His shouts quickly woke the cautious old lady. She screamed when first she discovered a man in her trap. Then she telephoned for the police, who were overjoyed to learn that the captive was none other than "Black Rufus" himself.

The cage was hauled to the surface of the ground, and, as the news of the important capture spread, it was quickly surrounded by people.

In vain the Joker insisted he was only masquerading. They laughed at him and promptly clapped him into jail, where he remained until his friends came on the morrow to release him.

The disguise had been successful, it is true, but in a way different from what the Joker had expected.

of holding any opinion he chooses upon any subject or topic on the earth, or off it, and of airing those opinions anywhere and to anyone who cares to listen to him. He can do this to any extent so long as he does not become an actual "nuisance," or cause large crowds to gather, so that the public highways are obstructed; and so long as he keeps his personal remarks within fair limits, and makes no statements regarding other people, which are obviously slanderous.

Closely akin to the right of free speech is the "liberty of the Press," which, interpreted, means that any man is at liberty to read what he chooses, and write what he chooses, provided he does not break the law and infringe the rights of other people.

There is also what is termed the "right of public meeting," which means simply the right of private individuals to assemble and meet together in any place they think fit, provided they are not trespassing or obstructing the public highway. While assembled there, they can say what they please within reason; that is, anything except that which would tend to stir up riots or incite people to commit crimes.

As the law now stands Britons are entitled to hold whatever religious opinions they choose and to observe whatever form of religious worship they like best. A man may be a Mormon if he wishes; but if he does, he must remember that, should he marry more than one wife, he will be punished for bigamy.

The rights of the Briton stop short at one wife.

BIG CRIMINAL ROUND-UPS.

The Largest, 6,500 Persons, Was Made by Peter the Great.

The arrest of thirty-five male and female criminals is a big enough coup in its way. But it is by no means the biggest on record.

Indeed, not longer ago than March 20th, last, no fewer than two hundred criminals were then called upon to appear before the police in their various cells, and the majority of them were disposed of with the Sledge, never to be heard of again.

In Dublin, on January 28th, 1886, fifty suspects were rounded up and together under the name of "A's." And this was followed, a year later, by the simultaneous seizure of twenty in "B's."

When St. Paul's Cathedral was closed to the general public, and a number of the old inmates were taken in by making out a list of the names of the inmates and a number of the inmates in an attempt to get them out of the city, which was a very successful undertaking.

Some of the prisoners were taken to the city hall, and the day following the capture of the inmates, April 19th, 1890, with the inmates and 270 warrants of arrest, nearly all of which were executed in the course of the afternoon.

Perhaps the worst of the lot in this direction was the Peter the Great, who, when at work in Dublin dockyard, was recruited by Russia by a conspiracy of the Strelitz. He at once issued orders for the arrest of everybody suspected of being in any way implicated in the affair, and about 6,500 persons were seized. Many of these Peter then added with his own hand, two thousand were tortured and slain, and the rest were driven North into the frozen wilderness round Archangel, there to perish miserably.

Ring Game

WITH very little trouble you may construct this game from strong cardboard. Upon the top of the four cardboard posts should be fastened hooks, each being of such a height that when the ring is permitted to swing forward upon the length of its cord, it may be possible to encircle the hook with the ring.

The players swing the ring in turn. The object of the game is to encircle the four posts, which, by the way, should be numbered 1, 2, 3, 4. First, No. 1 post must be encircled, then Nos. 2, 3 and 4, in order. The player gains another turn every time he swings the ring over a post; but if by chance the ring should encircle the wrong post, he must begin over again with No. 1 post. He who first places the ring over the four posts in proper order wins the game.

SURE CURE.

"Now, my dear sir," said Dr. Fox, "I can't cure you unless you promise to do everything I tell you."

"All right," said Skinner, "I promise."

"Good! Now, first of all, pay me my last year's bill."

HUH! DOES FITZBOOM

Mysterious Pocket-Money

"WHAT'S the use of being so staidious, Ned? Summer vacation will be here before you're half ready for it. I don't see how a fellow could be so crazy over birds' eggs anyway."

A peculiar smile appeared on Ned's face. He knew Dick was afraid that unless birds' eggs were left alone and money earned the two would be unable to go canoeing and camping that summer.

"How are your rabbits selling?" asked Ned.

"Oh, I'm making piles of money," Dick replied, "but I say, old chap, you'll have to hustle."

The other smiled again as he said: "Don't worry about me. I'll be ready to bear my share of the expense of the trip."

Dick shook his head doubtfully, but he said nothing further, nor did he again mention the subject.

At last came the time for their outing. Dick had purchased all the equipment and provisions, and he now invited his brother to accompany him to the ship dealer's office, where final arrangements regarding the buying of a canoe were to be made. They had selected a desirable canoe on a former visit.

For some reason Dick looked perturbed. However, he did not reveal the cause for his unwanted silence, and soon the two were enthusiastically examining the canoe.

"And now, Mr. Grim," said Dick, "we will pay you."

"Pay me? Why, your brother has already settled the bill," returned the shipbuilder, laughing.

Dick, greatly surprised, glanced at Ned, but the latter made no explanation until they were on their way home. Then he said:

"You see, Ned, searching for birds' eggs may be a source of profit as well as education. You know how early I rose every morning during the spring and went out into the fields. Well, the eggs I then found weren't added to my collection. I spent all the time hunting on the ground for plovers' eggs, and so skilful did I become in finding large numbers that I made quite a fortune from them. Each one brought me six shillings in town. It was only because I wished to surprise you that I paid for the canoe in advance."

"But really, Dick," continued the brother, teasingly, "selling plovers' eggs is much more profitable than raising rabbits, even if it is a crazy pastime."

The TRAILING of PETER BARN-OWL

MRS. BARN-OWL rested in an almost erect position, her drooping eyelids indicating that she was asleep. Little Peter, too, sat stiffly upright, endeavoring in every way to imitate the manners of his mother. Peter was trying very, very hard to be dignified, and to set a good example for his two younger brothers, who were several weeks younger. But the tiny brothers were not thinking of manners just then. Wee balls of down were they, nestling cozily beside their mother. Daylight had come upon Mr. Barn-Owl during his adventures begun the preceding evening, so he had been forced to take refuge in another hiding place some distance from his own nest. Mrs. Barn-Owl's concern did not prevent her from taking a nap, however, and, as it was broad daylight, she and her little ones were very sleepy indeed.

Meanwhile, a Boy was painfully clambering up the sides of the old tower, almost ridden with vines and creepers of refreshing green. It would seem that he must surely fall and break his neck, but he appeared not to mind the danger. Working his way steadily upward; gaining a foothold in crevices of the mouldering ruins; grasping a sturdy vine—on he climbed until, with a mighty effort, he drew himself up to a level with the tower where was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barn-Owl and the little Barn-Owls.

The Boy's eyes gleamed wickedly as they fell upon Peter Barn-Owl. Truly, the little fellow was as cunning as an owl could be—and that, you must know, is very cunning indeed. Perfectly marked—a bright yellow on the upper parts of his head and back, with gray and brown zigzag lines, and a plentiful sprinkling of small whitish dots; face and throat a beautiful white; and underneath, white with brownish points.

What a lovely pet he would make! But the Boy reckoned without his host—or, rather, his hostess. Mrs. Owl had no intention of permitting Peter to be carried away. She flew in the face of the intruder and, although half blinded by the daylight, succeeded in making him draw back from the nest. Little Peter, too, hissed and snapped and flapped in the most approved style. At last the Boy gave up his evil purpose and withdrew.

The baby Barn-Owls slept through the fight. Peter and his mother were too excited for further slumber. Said Mrs. Barn-Owl in great indignation:

"Now, my son, you have made the acquaintance of Man—a big sort of brute who repps with evil all the good we do for him."

"Isn't he a horribly big animal, mother?" remarked Peter.

"Some men are much bigger," Mrs. Barn-Owl continued; "the one you saw is only a Manlet, or a Boy. As I was saying, they are very, very ungrateful beasts. We catch for them mice, moles, insects, many of which are exceedingly harmful to Man. Yet they reward us by accusing us of all kinds of witchery; they say bad things about us, and sometimes they kill us. In only one part of the world do Men treat us justly. That is in Tartary. One Man, speaking of the Owl who lives there, says:

"The Moguls and natives almost pay it divine honors, because they attribute to it the preservation of the founder of their empire, Genghis Khan. The prince, with his small army, happened to be surprised and put to flight by his enemies, and forced to conceal himself in a little coppice; an owl settled on the bush under which he was hid, and induced his pursuers not to search there, as they thought it impossible that any man could be concealed in a place where that bird would perch. Thenceforth they held it to be sacred, and every one wore a plume of the feathers of this species upon his head. To this day the Kalmucks continue the custom on all great festivals, and some tribes have an idol in the form of an owl, to which they fasten the real legs of one."

"But you must wait awhile until I have satisfied the hunger of these clamorous little babies," said he, as the two little owlets began to make queer little noises just like the snores of a Man. Don't imagine, however, that Owls really snore. Oh, dear no—they're too well bred for that."

Father Barn-Owl then gracefully swooped down into a barnyard nearby. Soon he returned with a mouse. Back and forth he flitted, bringing a mouse at least once in ten minutes, until the hunger of all was satisfied. Then he beckoned Peter to follow him, and the two made their way together to the barn. Mr. Barn-Owl explained how their soft feathers permitted them to fly so noiselessly, and how, without a with his son's aptitude for hunting. "Tomorrow," said he, "you shall try it alone."

Of course, Peter was full of excitement. At last he was going to become a mighty hunter like father. Just as he was about to set out he happened to remember the conversation between the two rats on the night before.

"I'll go straight to the granary," said Peter to himself. And with great speed and suddenness the courageous Barn-Owl swooped down upon a great army of gnawing rats. One after another he killed with remarkable swiftness. Then back to the nest he carried a rat. His mother nodded approvingly. Again Peter started for the granary, and brought another of the slain rats to the nest; and so he returned with one after another, until Mother Barn-Owl was almost overcome with amazement.

And you should have seen Father Barn-Owl when he came home from his night's hunting, and saw that Peter had provided twice the amount of his spoil. He would have turned his eyes round and round, only for the fact that the Owl's eyes can't turn. As it was, he gave one long, astonished hoot, and then gasped:

"You'll do, Peter; I can't see that you need much more training."

The "Porcupine"

AT THE beginning of his reign, Louis XII of France directed that the crown of gold then in use be replaced by another coin. This piece of money was promptly styled a "porcupine," and such was the name by which it was recognized.

In 1591 Lord Pulsard de Glacis was appointed governor of Macon. He arrived at this city with his wife, who was very haughty and dignified. The baillie was there to greet him, together with the chief men of the city. After mutual salutations were over, three farmers appeared before the Governor, saying they wished to purchase tracts of royal land.

"Very well," replied the Governor; "each of you bring me a porcupine tomorrow. I shall give the three of you an audience tomorrow morning."

Once outside the castle, the three farmers scratched their heads in perplexity. "A porcupine apiece!" What a strange request! And porcupines were animals not readily found. (You see, the worthy farmers had never heard of a coin by that name.) So they hunted zealously in the woods for their porcupines.

The next morning the three farmers punctually arrived at the Governor's audience chamber. Each carefully bore a porcupine in his arms. Seeking to rid themselves of their charges until the Governor appeared, they deposited the little animals on chairs.

Soon the lord entered with his lady, the baillie bringing up the rear. Acknowledging the humble bows of the farmers, the noble party seated itself—but, alas, upon the chairs already possessed by the porcupines. My lady fainted, and was supported by the baillie, who was himself suffering from numerous wounds inflicted by the spines of the porcupines. As for the Governor—he was too angry to think of anything but the stupidity of the farmers. Needless to say, they were not granted the land they sought.

MR. BARN-OWL DESCENDED ON HIS PREY

"I would rather that we were venerated everywhere, my son—as of right we should be. But here comes your father."

As she spoke Mr. Barn-Owl came flitting through the heavy dusk, and greeted the loved ones affectionately. Mrs. Barn-Owl related the incidents of the day, warmly praising Peter's part in putting their enemy, the Boy, to flight.

"Well, well, my son," announced Mr. Barn-Owl, with a proud smile, "since you are coming along so rapidly with your education, I think I shall take you mouse-hunting tonight."

sound, they could drop down upon their prey.

Peter was crouching in a little hollow watching his father fall upon a mouse that scuttled from his hole, when he heard two rats squeaking behind him. One said to the other:

"The Farmer Man has just stocked his granary with delicious grain; and our leader has planned for us to attack it in a body tomorrow night."

Peter Barn-Owl heard no more, for the rats disappeared, and he afterward forgot to mention the matter to his father.

Mr. Barn-Owl was greatly pleased

JEFF MASTERSON'S OPPORTUNITY

PROBABLY the first resolution Jeff made was that some day he would be a railroad man. His training to that end began at a very early age, for his father held a responsible position in a great locomotive building works, and many a visit Jeff paid there. Hardly a detail escaped his observation.

Jeff still remembers his awe and gratitude when he was permitted to enter the cab of a locomotive while it was being tested. The engine was placed on a treadmill; but while the body of the locomotive was upon rails, the driv-tached engine of the "special," which stood near the station. To his astonishment he found no one in the cab. Doubtless the engineer and fireman were so indiscreet as to both slip away for something to eat.

"There's not a moment to lose," muttered Jeff.

Without an instant's delay he backed the engine off the siding, past the station and toward the private car on the siding below.

The whistle of the local train was sounding beyond the curve close to the siding when Jeff coupled the car, live building works, and many a visit Jeff paid there. Hardly a detail escaped his observation.

Jeff still remembers his awe and gratitude when he was permitted to enter the cab of a locomotive while it was being tested. The engine was placed on a treadmill; but while the body of the locomotive was upon rails, the driving wheels rested upon large steel wheels which were connected with various kinds of measuring apparatus. Thus the engine might "go" at the rate of a mile a minute and yet not move from its position. All the other arrangements for testing the pulling power, the dial records of steam and water gauges, and starting under all sorts of unfavorable conditions, were explained to the boy. You may know that there was little Jeff did not understand about a locomotive.

When a western vacation trip was broached to the lad he did not take as kindly to the idea as might have been expected. The truth of the matter was that he did not wish to be away from his beloved engines even for a short time. But he yielded, and journeyed to a little station in the Rockies, where his cousin, a mining operator, was stationed.

Looking up from his magazine, an Essex farmer said vehemently to his wife one night: "Do you know what I'd have done if I had been Napoleon?" "Yes," the woman answered, "You'd have settled down in Corsica, and spent your life grubbing about in a d luck and bad times."

"THREW WIDE THE THROTTLE, AND DASHED AHEAD"

One afternoon Jeff sauntered up to the little railroad station. While in conversation with the telegrapher, he remarked:

"I see there's a private car on the siding just below."

"It's owned by the president of the road," began the telegrapher, when he turned suddenly, grasped Jeff by the shoulder and exclaimed:

"You don't mean the nearest siding, do you?"

Jeff nodded.

The operator stared wildly. "Jerusalem!" he gasped; "there's something wrong with the engineer's instructions. The local train is due on that siding in five minutes in order to give the right of way to the express, which follows close behind."

Jeff understood the situation in a moment. With a bound he was out the door and dashing toward the de-

"IN THE MIDST OF LIFE IS DEATH"

It was a May morning not long ago,

To me it scarcely seems a day;

My own dear father, Oh I loved him so

Was called from this bright earth away.

Death is ever present, yes ever near;

The rich and poor alike must share

The pang of parting with those we hold

The greatest trial we hear can bear.

Yet harder wait, when without warning,

My father was called to realms above

Without good-bye to us now left mourning,

The wife and children he did love,

An hour before with a smile on his face,

He left his cheerful, happy home

So little knowing 'er night in that place,

The deepest sorrow was to come.

How can I describe the terrible death,

Crushed by a heavy fallen stone

Close to the wagon wheel, gasping for

He lay mangled, yet not alone.

Quickly his comrade rushes to his side,

To move the stone tries all in vain

'I'm dying' gasps father, already the tide,

Was rushing in, would end all pain.

What was he to do, the only near,

Leave the dying and rush for aid?

His brain was whirling, he could not

It will be too late I'm afraid.

And so it proved when friends hurrying

Reached the spot where silent he lay

The breath he drew, they knew it was his Angels bore father's soul away.

With sighs they raised the form, a dread-

Of life blood lay there at his side;

His face and hands were sprinkled with

His clothes also were deeply dyed

District Meeting.

The District Meeting of the Methodist Church, Napanee District, was held in Trinity Church on Tuesday. The ministerial session commenced at 9 p. m. A feature of interest in that session was the recommendation of a young man for the ministry. There were no cases of heresy or improprieties of administration and the session was closed with a conversation on the state of the work. The afternoon session was composed of ministers and laymen in equal proportions, and had under consideration all the ministerial and financial affairs of the church. The district is a very wide one, going as far north as Denbigh and as far south as Adolphustown. A complimentary resolution, expressive of appreciation of the retiring chairman, was carried by a standing vote. Mr. Duke is retiring for a year's rest, having felt very heavily the strain of his presidential year. Rev. J. F. Mears returns to the active work. Rev. Richard Duke and Rev. W. H. Embley will represent the District on the stationing committee of Conference to be held in Lindsay next month.

Tired nerves, with that "no ambition" feeling that is commonly felt in spring or early summer, can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative.
 One will absolutely note a changed feeling within 18 hours after beginning to take the Restorative. The bowels get sluggish in the winter-time, the circulation often slows on, the kidneys are inactive, and even the heart in many cases grows decidedly weaker. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is recognized everywhere as a genuine tonic to these vital organs. It builds up and strengthens the worn-out weakened nerves;
 it sharpens the failing appetite, and universally aids digestion. It always quickly brings renewed strength, life, vigor, and ambition. Try it and be convinced.

 With sighs they raised the form, a dreadful flood,
 Of life blood lay there at his side;
 His face and hands were sprinkled with

 His clothes also were deeply dyed
 Sad news travel with fast hastening wing.
 We children were summoned that day
 Soon to our sorrowful homes it did bring,
 Us from our school and far away.
 They brought him home in his narrow bed,
 They folded his hands upon his breast,
 With tears they left us to look at our dead,
 So calm, so peaceful, now at rest.
 Then came that morn, O God I now recall
 The agony of that dreadful day,
 When our father's form so dear to all
 Was laid from earthly eyes away.
 It seemed to us then our hard hearts
 (would break
 We forgot God in our despair,
 But he still lingered near, did not forsake
 Us, but cried, "Look up I am here."
 Though lonely our hearts at times will

 If we look up, we soon Christ's face may

 We'll meet our loved in heaven some in his ninety-first year, had been in poor health for some time, having been confined successful farmers, and a man of sterling qualities. He was a staunch Presbyterian and had been an elder of that church at Harrowsmith, from the time it was estab-

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

KINGSFORD.

The following address together with a beautiful gold cross and brooch were presented to the Rev. T. F. and Mrs. Dowdell after service on Sunday May 10th.

DEAR MR. AND MRS. DOWDELL:

We, the undersigned on behalf of the congregation of St. Jude's Church, Kingsford, desire to convey to you our sincere regret that we are so soon to lose you from our midst. During the whole period of your stay here, we have learned to love, and respect you both.

Under your ministry, Mr. Dowdell, the Mission has made splendid progress, in every department of Church work, but particularly we are grateful for the able manner in which the restoration and improvement of St. Jude's Church, Kingsford, and the building of the tower and chancel of St. John's Church, Selby, have been effected. We feel that in losing you we are losing a Godly and faithful Clergyman, one who realizes that his parish is truly a city of Soulds.

And you, Mrs. Dowdell, have ever been a true help meet to your husband. We are sure that in your departure we are losing one, who in the truest sense, has been a "Mother in Israel," and who responds in a very real way to the Exhortation of Psalmist "that our daughters may be as the polished corners of the temple."

We pray, God bless you both and give you every prosperity in your new field of labor.

Signed on behalf of the congregation of St. Jude's Church, Kingsford.

SOLBY.

The members of the congregation of St. John's Church, Solby, met at the Rectory last Friday evening and presented the following address and got to The Rev. T. Edmonson Dowdell, R. A.

Rev. and Dear Sir,

We, the parishioners of St. John's Church, Solby, having learned of your removal from among us, feel that we cannot allow you to go away without expressing to you the deep sense of personal loss which we all feel in severing the ties which have bound you to us during the seven years of your ministry in this parish. You have indeed done your duty as a priest of the church, you have comforted the sick, encouraged the dying, consoled the bereaved, instructed the young and to all of us you have preached the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ and the doctrines of our most Holy Faith. And not only in ecclesiastical but also in secular affairs, will the parish have occasion to miss you. You have gone in and out among us faithfully and taken your share of our work and of our pleasures, and in this connection we desire to place on record our gratitude to you for your unwearied labours in the building of the tower and chancel in our Church.

We also desire to include Mrs. Dowdell in this expression of our esteem. By her unfailing courtesy, her happy disposition, her ability and willingness to assist in the ministrations of our services and in all kinds of public work, she has endeared herself to all, and her memory will ever remain green in our minds. We rejoice to think that you are being advanced in your sacred calling and we feel sure that the Master will reward you as the ever-rewards his faithful servants. We ask your acceptance of this solemn testimonial as a slight token of our good will and trust it may ever remind you of those among whom you have labored so faithfully.

We trust that as you are not going far away, we may have many opportunities of meeting you again.

Take as a plank of driftwood, tossed on the watery main

Another plank encounters, meets, touches, parts again,
So is it ever with us, on life's unending sea.

We meet, we greet, we sever, perhaps eternally.

We will ever pray that God may have you both in His Holy keeping.

Signed on behalf of the congregation of St. John's Church, Solby.
